Senate Unit Votes Lower Income Tax Exemptions

Change Would Affect Seven Million; Joint Return Is Shelved With Pay Deduction

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Broadening the tax base to tap lean and fat pocketbooks, the Senate Finance Committee yesterday approved lowered individual income tax exemptions and heightened individual surtax collections all along the line.

The base broadening move dipped exemptions to $750 for single persons and $1500 for married to bring in about seven million more tax returns. House surtaxes on present taxpayers at the same time were simplified and payments stepped up above House levels.

Joint Return Sidetracked

The committee rang up 303 million dollars additional revenue from these changes alone, then wiped out tax advantages accruing to residents of eight "community property" states to collect another 51 million dollars.

Speeding action on the $3,236,700,000 House tax bill, the Senate group in one day raised its total to $3,590,000,000 without reaching the lucrative field of excise taxation.

Postponed indefinitely was the 300 million dollar House-rejected proposal to compel joint income tax returns from husbands and wives.

Sidetracked as well were independent moves to write into the bill a general manufacturers' sales tax and a withholding tax reaching salaries, dividends and other income at the source.

Other Action

Other tax actions of the Senate committee:

Absorbed the 10 per cent special defense tax into a new schedule of individual surtaxes for purpose of simplification rather than revenue. Similarly absorbed the 10 per cent defense tax on corporations in the corporate normal tax rate.

Left exemptions from estate and gift taxes at the House level of $40,000, and approved House estate and gift tax rates estimated to yield 153 millions in new revenue.

Provided that where a husband pays alimony, the payment can be deducted from his taxable income by the husband and taxed as income of the wife.

While about seven million new tax returns would be filed under the base broadening move, Treasury experts said only about 49 million dollars in new revenue would come from taxpayers below the present $800 (single) and $2,000 (married exemptions.

Balance of the 303 million dollar revenue increase estimated from the move would come from a step-up in surtax collections automatically following up the entire income tax schedule.

U. S. Ensign Lost In British Crash

United States Naval Ensign David Allen Eldred, 25, was reported by the Navy last night to be presumably drowned as a result of a flying boat crash Saturday while acting as observer with the British navy.

Eldred, a native of Burlington, Wash., was assigned to the United States Embassy in London last April as assistant Naval attache and assistant Naval attache for air on duty involving flying.

Eldred was appointed aviation cadet in the Naval Reserve in 1938 and a Naval Reserve ensign the following year.

New Plan For Annapolis Appointments?

At present, candidates for Annapolis or West Point must obtain an appointment from a Congressman. The Senate passed a bill which would allow young men to apply to the schools directly. The House voted it down. How do the voters want appointments made? Read the Gallup Poll in tomorrow's Post.

Nondefense Economies Spiked on a Point of Order

Copyright, 1941, by The Washington Post

"SAVING is not germane to spending."

The wisecrack was a bitter one.

Representative Disney (Democrat), of Oklahoma, had just been ruled out of order.

He had moved in the Ways and Means Committee for $1,800,000,000 in nondefense economies. A point of order was raised and sustained. It wasn't germane to the tax bill.

In a Congress that voted $7,145,000,000 in appropriations nonessential to defense for the 1942 fiscal year this is the sole instance on record of an effort sharply to cut nonmandatory outlays.

Congress, with one signal exception, voted the huge sums urgently needed for defense.

But it voted "as usual" for civil purposes other large sums not essential in an emergency.

SELECTEES and their families had been asked to make sacrifices. Taxpayers were being asked in this bill to pay sacrificial taxes to carry the defense load. And now they must carry as well many of the "anti-depression" costs built up in the pump-priming pre-war days.

Precious Are Items That Draw Votes

Before the Ways and Means Committee on April 24, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau recommended a billion-dollar slash in such outlays.

He was specific. Leaving apportionment of the cut to Congress, he suggested reductions in appropriations for NYA, CCC, WPA, public works, roads and agriculture. These, without exception, are items highly popular in Congress, involving projects, allocations and vote-aids in home districts.

He recommended a careful study of other functions with an eye to saving of more funds that could be applied to defense.

Between that April 24 appearance and Morgenthau's appearance before the Senate Finance Committee on August 8 no Congressional effort was made to effect the cut, except the attempt that was "out of order."

BEFORE the Finance Committee, Morgenthau repeated his request in more general terms. He said:

"Along with increased taxation should go the maximum reduction in the ordinary nondefense expenditures of Government. The burden of paying for defense is so heavy that it should be relieved at every possible point."

That last recommendation came nearly six weeks after Congress had completed regular appropriations for the fiscal year starting last July 1.

These included, among other nondefense sums freely voted:

For general public works	$531,233,060
For aids to agriculture	1,100,535,785
For aids to youth	338,727,000
For work relief	385,905,000

Ammunition For C. O. P., Not Defense

The first two of these items represented actual increases over last year's high farm and public works appropriations.

House Republicans sensed an issue, grabbed it to make a long indictment of Administration "extravagances" in their minority report on the tax bill, used it to jab the President for not urging economies on the Appropriations Committee, but stopped there.

The general public, selective service conscious, defense conscious and, soon-to-be, tax conscious, meanwhile was showing interest.

SENATOR BYRD (Democrat), of Virginia, on August 15 introduced in the record a speech by Dr. Henry M. Wriston, president of Brown University, and chairman of "The Citizens' Emergency Committee on Non-defense Expenditures."

"Defense comes first," said Dr. Wriston, "the essential services come second, and other things should come a poor third or be dropped entirely. In short, there must be a system of priorities in Federal expenditures. To that end, this committee will begin shortly to make specific suggestions."

Another educator earlier appeared before the Ways and Means Committee to voice fear "for the future of our form of Government" if taxes and spending continue to rise. He was Dr. George S. Benson, president of Harding College of Searcy, Ark., which he said educates two boys for what it costs the Government to keep one in a CCC camp. Dr. Benson suggested $2,031,000,000 in possible cuts, including complete elimination of CCC and NYA appropriations. Committeemen, from Chairman Doughton down, praised his statement, but advised him to go to the Appropriations Committee, because Ways and Means lacked say about cuts.

Thus Congress on its economy roulette. The ball always is kept spinning, but seldom comes to rest on a slash.

Morgenthau Saw No Desire To Save

"Have you seen any recent evidence on the part of Congress of a willingness to save money?" Senator Vandenberg asked Morgenthau at the Senate tax hearings.

"No, sir," replied the Treasury Secretary.

"None in the world?" said Senator Bailey.

"No, sir," said Morgenthau.

Bailey suggested the President, Morgenthau and House and Senate leaders get together on a program of nondefense retrenchment and Congress would sustain it.

"I have made that suggestion two or three times, but nothing has come of it," said the Secretary. "Just as long as the appropriating committee is entirely independent of the taxing committee and we

Many Might Quit Jobs, Too

200 Threaten to Leave Navy's Va. Homes Over Extra Costs

More than 200 Naval torpedo plant workers, residents of the Navy's new housing project at Chinquapin Village near Alexandria, threatened last night to move out of the village rather than accept a new ruling that utility costs would not be covered by rent payments after September 1.

Moreover, the villagers' protest committee estimated that about 60 per cent of that number would also quit their torpedo plant jobs rather than pay the extra utility costs.

The new ruling, made by the Navy's Bureau of Yards and Docks about ten days ago, lowered the monthly rentals about $3, and required the residents to pay for their own gas, water and electricity.

Since the houses are heated by gas, employes claim, it will take nearly $20 a month for gas alone during the winter months, in contrast to the $3 reduction.

About 225 members of the 300-family village attended the protest meeting in the outdoor court. A four-man committee, headed by George Chandler, reported that no reply had been received to a note of protest sent to the Navy last week. Pending a reply to this, the committee urged the workers to write to their home Congressman. All 48 States are said to be represented in the village.

Capital Faces Cent-a-Quart Rise in Milk

Wickard Approves Plans for Increase; Boost Is Expected To Affect Needy

A 1-cent-a-quart increase in milk and cream by September 1 for consumers in the Washington area was foreseen last night by District dairymen, following approval by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard of proposals to increase minimum prices paid to milk producers. The move is expected to send 5-cent milk for relief clients up to 6 cents.

The Department of Agriculture announced yesterday that a referendum among producers and dairymen would be held immediately to determine if they favored the increase. It must be approved by two-thirds of the producers and by dairies representing at least 50 per cent of the volume of milk handled in the District marketing area.

Agriculture Department officials expressed their opinion that the vote by producers would be a mere formality, because it was the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association which first proposed the increase. If a sufficient number of dairymen (distributors) do not sign the agreement, but producers approve it in the required majority, the increase can be ordered by the Secretary of Agriculture, with the approval of President Roosevelt.

Vote Set on Prices

Milk dealers in the District said they would not be able to absorb the 1-cent increase, and that it would have to be added to the retail price of milk and cream. They anticipate approval of the higher-priced milk and cream this week with the increase going into effect by September 1.

Wickard's approval of the price increase came despite a letter he had received recently from Federal Price Administrator Leon Henderson, requesting the Secretary to deny the cent-a-quart increase.

Henderson wrote: "We realize that dairymen have been contending with rising costs for feed, labor and herd replacement, but the drought seems to have been fully relieved."

Other Changes

The Federal Price Administrator's office asserted last night that Henderson is still opposed to the price rise, but that he feels that matter is entirely up to Wickard.

Other changes to be voted upon by the distributors and the dairymen are provisions for the payment to new producers by milk handlers of the same prices as to old producers. The distributors also want the marketing administrator to designate an independent laboratory for testing the butterfat content of milk, and this is included in the proposed amendments.

Secretary Wickard's approval of the changes, including the price increase, was due to "mounting costs of feed, labor and equipment for producers," Agriculture officials stated.

Increase by Classes

The amendment, proposed under the Federal milk marketing order, would increase the minimum Class 1 price (fluid milk) 40 cents per hundredweight, and the minimum Class 2 price (fluid cream) 20 cents per hundredweight. Class 3 prices (milk for butter) would remain unchanged.

Capt. Truscott Called for Naval Intelligence Post

Capt. Floyd A. Truscott, ace detective and commander of the Tenth Precinct Station, has been called into active Navy duty as a reserve officer, The Post learned last night.

He was promoted from junior grade to senior grade lieutenant and placed in charge of Naval intelligence in the District, Maryland and Virginia.

Truscott, at 41, a leading candidate for the vacant chief of detectives post, began 20 days' leave from police service Friday. He will request leave for military duty at the end of that period.

Ickes' Gas Tank 'For Farm Machines'

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

The 500-gallon private gasoline tank at Headlands, the Olney, Md., estate of Harold L. Ickes, petroleum coordinator for national defense, is used only to provide gasoline for farm equipment and for the farm station wagon, officials of the Department of Interior said last night in commenting on published photographs of the pump.

None of the fuel from the pump goes into the limousine which takes Ickes to and from his work each day, officials said, because not only that car but also the fuel for it is provided by the Government.

At present, Ickes and his wife are on vacation in Olympia National Park, Oregon, and could not be reached for explanation of the pump. It was reported that Ickes had at least one tractor and other assorted farm machinery which use gasoline, as well as the station wagon which he uses when not on official business.

Reds Retire on Leningrad Line; Russians and British Fight Way Into Iran From 5 Points

Invasion Designed To Foil Nazi Plot; Soviets Report 25-Mile Advance

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), Aug. 26. British and Russian troops smashing into Iran (Persia) with the avowed purpose of ridding that country of Nazi agents and joining forces in the fight against Germany today were reported well inside that ancient land.

[United Press dispatches from Istanbul revealed the British, under the command of Sir Archibald Wavell, were striking into Iran as part of a five-pronged attack, with Soviet troops thrusting down both sides of the Caspian Sea, a British force landed on the Persian Gulf coast and two other British columns driving in from British-controlled Iraq on the west and Baluchistan on the east.]

The British did not reveal the extent of their drive which began yesterday from the Iraq border and the Persian Gulf. They acknowledged meeting "some resistance" from an Iranian army that in all totals only 190,000 men.

Ships and Towns Attacked

Premier Ali Mansur told the Iran Parliament in Teheran that the British had attacked Iranian ships, presumably in the Persian gulf port of Bandar Mashur, and also had bombed and shelled Iranian towns.

"All necessary measures to face this attack," have been taken by Iranian authorities, the premier was quoted by the Teheran radio.

The Government, he said, had scrupulously pursued a neutral policy, and in an attempt to calm the British and Soviet governments, even had taken "special measures to reduce the number of Germans in the country."

"It is, however, most regrettable that in spite of all efforts of the Iranian government to preserve peace in the country, instead of maintaining cordial relations and discussing matters in a peaceful and understanding way British and Soviet representatives arrived at 4 o'clock this morning and presented threatening memoranda."

R. A. F. Covers Advance

The joint invasion—opened with assurances in both London and Moscow that the sole purpose was to end a growing threat offered by the intrigues of Nazi residents of the kingdom—will establish an Allied line of communication to Russia from the Persian Gulf in case the German drive into the Ukraine turns into a threat to the Soviet oil fields of the Caucasus.

Speedy Approval Likely on Biddle as Attorney General

Francis Biddle, a Philadelphia lawyer who made good as a New Dealer, was nominated yesterday by President Roosevelt to be Attorney General.

Biddle, Solicitor General since January, 1940, would succeed Robert H. Jackson, who has been elevated to the Supreme Court.

Congressional reaction, from Republicans as well as Democrats, was favorable to the nomination.

A Shorter Route

By Ernest Barcella
United Press Staff Writer

The United States probably will deliver war supplies to Britain and Russia under the protective guns of its Pacific fleet if the Anglo-Russian campaign in Iran succeeds, competent sources here declared last night.

A junction of the Soviet-British armies in Iran would forge the last link in a strategic, trans-Pacific supply line extending from the United States west coast, past Singapore, thence around India into the Persian Gulf and across Iran and the Caspian Sea to southeast Russia.

The fleet could guarantee the route without leaving the Pacific, thus blasting Axis hopes of forcing the fleet into the Atlantic so that Japan would be free to pursue her expansionist program in the southern Pacific.

The route would be outside the war zones and shorter than the present route to the Middle East via the Red Sea and Egypt.

An immediate consequence, it was said, would be to avert a worsening of relations between the United States and Japan. The Nipponese already are objecting vigorously to American aid to Russia via Vladivostok. An explosion may come when the first supply ship—carrying aviation gasoline—enters Japanese waters through which it must pass to reach the Russian port.

Meanwhile the United States maintained a discreet silence yesterday on the British-Russian invasion of Iran.

Mohammed Schayesteh, the Iranian Minister, called at the State Department, and later told reporters heatedly that British and Russian charges that there were German agents in his country were pretexts for invasion of Iran.

20,000 Nazis Patrol Paris in New Sabotage

Squads and Armored Cars Guard Streets; 2 More Trains Wrecked

By Ralph E. Heinzen
United Press Staff Writer

Vichy, Aug. 25.—Armored cars and squads of German soldiers tonight were reported patrolling the streets of Paris to quell a series of demonstrations in the downtown section and a wave of sabotage that has caused two more train wrecks on major railroads.

An estimated 20,000 German soldiers have been assigned to aid the Paris police in a major effort to crush the agitation rampant in the metropolis and its suburbs, it was reported.

Saboteurs derailed four cars of a German train outside Montparnasse Station by removing a double length of rails, reports said. Land mines placed beneath the rails caused an explosion in the Juvish freight yards south of Paris.

Rail Traffic Blocked

A French train was wrecked across the main tracks in the station at Poissy, blocking traffic for 30 hours. Track-repair crews and the engineer and fireman of each wrecked train were reported arrested.

Minister of Justice Joseph Barthelemy reached Paris today to establish night terrorist courts for swift handling of sabotage cases and other anti-German and Communist agitators. The courts, empowered to inflict the death penalty, will begin operation tomorrow.

The courts will have to judge immediately several score Communists and other militants for distributing tracts, and an equal number of railway men and other workers arrested in the drive against sabotage.

Outbreaks All Over the City

Street manifestations have occurred in all sections of Paris, but the worst have taken place in the center of the city at St. Lazare station and the St. Denis arch.

Travelers arriving from Paris described a tense situation in the city. Radio and press are under strict censorship and all public meetings have been banned.

A "war of tracts" is growing constantly greater, reports said. The

Royal Reception

Roosevelts Dine Duke of Kent After He Visits Norfolk Yards

By International News Service

Climaxing a whirlwind tour of naval works in the Norfolk (Va.) area, the Duke of Kent returned here last evening and was guest of honor at a White House dinner.

Maj. Gen. Edwin M. Watson, a secretary to the President, greeted the duke at Bolling Field on his return. Army and Navy officers tendered the duke a reception at the airport and then he was rushed by automobile to the White House.

Grim, wartime precision marked the day's program for the royal visitor, a tall, slim man of 39, dressed in the uniform of the Royal Air Force, who came to Washington earlier in the day with President Roosevelt from Hyde Park.

After breakfasting with the Chief Executive aboard the Presidential train at Union Station, the Duke motored to the Anacostia Air Field, boarded a Navy transport plane, and was landed at the Norfolk Naval Base at 11 a. m., to be greeted by Rear Admiral Manley H. Simons, commandant of the Fifth Naval District.

After standing stiffly at salute as a Marine band played "God Save the King," the Duke inspected the Marine guard of honor and left the naval base through a mile-long

Odessa Holds Out

By the United Press

Moscow (Tuesday), Aug. 26. Russia admitted today that German forces driving on Leningrad have seized Novgorod, ancient city 100 miles south of the old czarist capital where a mighty army of soldiers and civilians was bracing itself for a last-ditch siege.

The German high command claimed the capture of Novgorod several days ago.

The Monday night Soviet war communique, covering yesterday's operations, said that Red army troops gave up Novgorod, one of the firmest obstacles in the path of enemy forces bearing in on Leningrad from three directions, only after long and bloody combat.

Nazis Facing Swamp

[A New York Times dispatch from Bern, Switzerland, said it appears the Soviet forces merely withdrew from Novgorod and still hold the strategically important Nikolajevsk heights on the western bank of the Volchov River, north of the town, from where their artillery commands all approaches.

[The evacuation of Novgorod places the Germans 35 miles from the Leningrad-Moscow railroad but it takes the Nazi forces into a wild swampland. It is expected they will encounter tremendous difficulties and lose thousands of men if they try to push through the swamps.]

The Russians stubbornly fought the enemy all along the whole front from Finland to the Black Sea throughout Monday, the communique said. It reflected a surge of activity on a far broader scale than usual, indicating that sectors heretofore relatively quiet had flared into action.

Interest was divided between Leningrad, where thousands of civilian men and women pitched in to defend the city, and the southern end of the straggling battle line where the vital Dnieper River Dam area admittedly was menaced.

Press on Dnieperopetrovsk

A warship of the Soviet Black Sea fleet was reported to have sunk a German submarine.

The latest communique said 46 enemy planes were shot down in air battles or destroyed on airdromes Sunday, with a loss of six Soviet planes.

Soviet tanks smashed far into the enemy rear on an unidentified sector, the communique said, and crushed two German infantry regiments and supply depots.

An earlier communique reported that Red army artillerymen supported by bayonet-wielding infantry had shattered a Nazi motorized column, killing or wounding hundreds of Germans.

It said the enemy was pressing stubbornly toward Dnieperopetrovsk, while Nazi and Finnish columns stabbing at the outer defenses

Russian Counterattack Blocked, 123 Tanks Smashed, Nazis Say

Heroic Efforts Drove Off Soviet Attacks, D.N.B. Tells Reich

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 25.—Germans said tonight that their troops on the central front had blocked a three-day Russian counterattack in which Red army waves charged repeatedly and without regard to losses.

Reports of this battle were given in dispatches from the front, the official communique saying that "operations in the east were making good progress everywhere."

The Russian Central Front counter-attack was described as having developed in two parallel drives, one using mainly big tanks and the second, in an adjoining sector, by mixed tanks and infantry, the Germans claimed the Russians lost 123 tanks in the two assaults.

"Strong armored forces supported by artillery were thrown into a counterattack on German positions," said the German report.

"In heroic fighting which lasted several days the German forces warded off all attacks and weakened the Soviet troops numerically and materially. In three days 95 Soviet tanks were left behind the German lines, including some of 32 and 45 tons.

"In the adjacent sector the Soviet attack was arrested by the effective defense of a German infantry regiment. Eight times the Soviets sent their waves against this regiment on Saturday. Eight times they succumbed to the German fire.

"After this successful defense, German armored cars crashed on the same day into the exhausted ranks of the enemy, causing them further severe losses. Apart from many prisoners, the Russians also lost much war material.

"Here 28 more Soviet tanks were destroyed and 31 guns and 30 motor trucks were either smashed or captured. Thus all Soviet attacks, undertaken without regard to men and material, collapsed."

New reports from the Baltic stated that German mines were accounting for an increasing number of Russian ships. It was announced that three Russian freighters, one destroyer, and two mine sweepers had been sunk.

D. N. B. said also that a Finnish coastal battery had sunk a 5,000-ton Soviet transport loaded with men and guns in the Gulf of Finland.

Civilian Defense Plans Inadequate, First Lady Says

Belief that the Government has not yet provided for satisfactory civilian participation in defense was expressed yesterday by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The First Lady, answering questions at her first "early autumn" press conference, said she had received "lots of letters" from persons willing to participate, but not knowing what they should do.

Since she has no official connection with the program, she said she routed all such letters to Mayor LaGuardia.

of Leningrad "have not relaxed their pressure."

[There is no confirmation here of reports, circulated abroad last week, that the Dnieper River Dam was blown up by retreating Russians, a New York Times dispatch said. But it is certain, the dispatch added, that no German troops have crossed the lower Dnieper River.]

The Soviet Baltic fleet spotted a German convoy of four transports heavily laden with troops, tanks and munitions, the communique said. Two transports were sunk, two others beached themselves and two escorting patrol boats ran aground, it added.

Information was scant concerning operations on the Leningrad and Ukrainian fronts. Official reports indicated a surge of activity all along the 1800-mile front, even in areas heretofore relatively quiet.

The war communique told of the Russians routing the German motorized column, claiming that, in addition to the hundreds of casualties, 200 Germans surrendered and stores of booty were taken.

Soviet patriots in the occupied regions of the Leningrad district were reported to be harassing the Germans far behind the fighting lines. Informants said the Germans had posted peasants as sentinels along every mile of communications, making them responsible for preventing guerrilla action and shooting those who failed.

Gen. I. A. Koney's counter-offensive on the Gomel front was reported continuing in its tenth day. The Russians said that up to Sunday they had recaptured 19 villages in the drive.

Finns Destroy 10 Red Ships in Island Seizure

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Aug. 25.—Destruction of ten Russian warships, tankers and troop-laden transports by Finnish naval forces which stormed and captured a group of islands off Virolahti, 40 miles west of Viipuri, was announced tonight by the Finnish command.

The Finns said seizure of the islands, ceded to Russia in the peace treaty of 1940, silenced Soviet big guns which had been harassing Finnish troops on the mainland, and tightened the ring of steel being drawn about Viipuri.

Soviet naval losses were listed as one destroyer, four transports, two tankers and three trawlers. In addition a large number of tugs and transport ferries were reported to have been set afire. One of the transports, a 5000-tonner, was said to have been jammed with Red army troops and war materials.

On the islands themselves, which lie just off the mainland, in the Gulf of Finland near the entrance to Viipuri Bay, the Finns reported the capture of numerous heavy coastal batteries, ammunition and sea-going vessels.

By land meanwhile Finnish forces were reported approaching the gates of Viipuri, once Finland's second city, which the Russians also gained in the peace of 1940.

Finnish war correspondents at the front related that in taking the islands the Finns met with the same stubborn Soviet resistance that they have encountered throughout the drive down the Karelian Isthmus.

Storm Troops were landed from speedy motorboats under cover of smoke bombs.

The correspondents said there still remained snipers in the dense forests and that rooting them out would take time.

The Communists dump the pamphlets in mailboxes, slip them into newspapers at newsstands or drop them from housetops.

In opposition, Anti-Communist sympathizers and Jew-baiters are flooding mailboxes and hallways with violently phrased attacks on Communists, Jews and the British.

In a roundup of Jews in the southern part of Paris last week, an automobile drove up to the curb near the Orleans gate. Three men pushed out a huge bale resembling a cotton bale, one of them slashed the bale with a knife and the car sped away.

A great quantity of Communist pamphlets spilled out, covering the sidewalk. The sidewalk crowd, remembering the German admonition against possession of the tracts, read them as they lay on the sidewalk, but nobody picked them up.

Serious manifestations of unrest are limited to the Paris region at present, travelers said.

Navy Told to Study Substitutes for Silk

Copyright by New York Times

All branches of the Navy yesterday were ordered to study the potentialities of silk substitutes in articles heretofore made of silk, in a letter distributed by James V. Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy.

The order was based on the threatened shortage of silk as a result of stoppage of imports from Japan.

and to the northeast from the Persian Gulf, and the Russians at the same time struck southward from the Caucasian frontiers.

Indian mechanized forces operating under cover of heavy R. A. F. squadrons where at the head of the British advance. In Baluchistan, bordering Iran on the southeast, other imperial troops were in action.

The Soviet forces were marching through the harsh mountain passes west of the Caspian Sea toward the important northern Iranian city of Tabriz as their first major objective. Tabriz is 320 miles northwest of Teheran, Iran's capital.

Self-Defense, Soviets Say

In Moscow, Mohamed Saed, Iran's veteran Russian-speaking Ambassador, received a note from Foreign Minister Molotov. It emphasized that Russia had no intention of pursuing the ancient dream of deposed Czars for a window on the Persian Gulf.

Russia intends to respect the independence of Iran, in common with Britain, it was said, and will withdraw her troops as soon as the Nazi threat has passed.

"The situation created in Iran is pregnant with danger," the document said. "It requires of the Soviet Union immediate execution of measures it has not only the right but also the duty to adopt in the interests of self-defense."

A treaty of February 26, 1921, with Iran, the note said, gave Russia the right to advance her troops into Iran if a third power attempted an armed usurpation there or sought to use Iran territory as a base against Russia or a Russian ally.

Coup d'Etat Feared

The Soviet government charged that Nazi conspirators and spies harbored by the Iranians were threatening a coup d'etat as in Iraq and were setting up centers of sabotage from which to wreck Soviet oil resources and industries.

Molotoff listed asserted Nazi spies and agents active in Iran. He declared they had stored 50 tons of explosives for sabotage in the Baku oil district and the adjacent Soviet territories of Turkmenistan and Azerbaidjan.

Britain also emphatically pledged that it had no designs upon Iran's territory or independence and would withdraw at the moment it deemed the German menace dissolved.

Both Russia and Britain emphasized that direct action had been ordered only after the repeated failure of the Indian Government of the Shah, Reza Kahn Pahlavi, to expel Nazi agents—a failure which persisted, the British statement declared, even after Britain and the Soviet Union had offered to find qualified experts to displace the German technicians and to aid in alleviating any temporary hardships that might be caused by a Nazi ouster.

An immediate and urgent British assignment was to prevent possible destruction by German agents of Iran's pipeline and oil fields.

Iran's army was estimated at 19 divisions of 10,000 men each, armed principally with Swedish-made artillery and its air force was said to consist of a single American-made Tomahawk plane and about a dozen British-made Hurricanes.

As they did in invading the Syria of Vichy, France, the British continued strong diplomatic efforts to avoid bloodshed as much as possible and to convince the Iranians of the futility of fighting.

Nazi Reaction Is 'Interest'

Berlin (Tuesday), Aug. 26 (AP).—The British-Russian march into Iran "deserves the strongest German interest," the Wilhemstrasse commentary Dienst aus Deutschland declared tonight.

"The Reich naturally does not feel it is in the role of nonparticipant," it added, but gave no additional information as to the Reich's reaction.

Envoy to Soviet Seeks Negotiated Peace

Moscow, Aug. 25.—The Iranian minister to Moscow, seeking a negotiated settlement of the British-Soviet invasion of Iran, was reported tonight to have asked his government to withdraw its troops from the frontiers and cease resistance against the attack.

Although no reply had been received from the Teheran government late tonight to the reported proposal of the Iranian minister, Mohamed Saed, Iranian circles said they were hopeful that the conflict might still be settled by diplomatic means.

(The Turkish radio at Ankara urged that Britain and Russia, whom it accused of "aggression" against Iran, attempt to settle the conflict by negotiation before war spreads over the Middle East.)

Senate Group Votes Lower Tax Exemptions

but reached about 2,500,000 more taxpayers by applying surtaxes on the first dollar of taxable income.

Steeper Schedule

The Senate committee likewise began surtaxes on the first dollar, after exemptions, but the base broadening and simplification moves resulted in a new and steeper schedule. White House surtax rates ranged from 3 to 75 per cent, the new Senate surtaxes scale upward from 6 per cent on the first taxable dollar to 77 per cent on taxable income in excess of five million dollars. This is in addition to the normal 4 per cent tax.

A $2,000 childless married couple, for example, who pay nothing under present law and are not taxed under the House bill, would pay $42 in normal and surtax rates under the Senate measure.

A $3,000 couple, who pays $30.80 under present law and $85.80 under the House bill, would pay $138, while a $5,000 couple, now taxed $110, raised to $308 by the House, would pay $375.

Single pocketbooks would be more heavily hit, though the tax would fall lightly on the $750 to $800 group covered by the Senate extension. An $800 single individual, for example, who now pays nothing under present law or the House bill, would be taxed only $3.

Eligible Bachelors

But a $1000 single person would pay $21, (he pays $4.40 now and $15.40 under the House bill) and a $2000 bachelor who now pays $44 ($110 under House rates) would pay $117. A $3000 single individual would pay $220.50. If he earned $5000 he would pay $482.50, instead of $171.60 under present law and $473 under House rates. A $10,000 bachelor would be taxed $1492.50. He pays $686.40 now. The House bill taxed him $1,469.60.

The base-broadening plan was approved 10 to 6, Chairman George announced.

Committee action in merging the 10 per cent special defense tax with the surtax schedule will enable a taxpayer to compute his total tax in two instead of three calculations.

Under the House bill, he must first compute his normal (4 per cent) tax and then figure his surtax. He must then total these two and increase the amount by 10 per cent. Under the Senate committee action, the special defense tax is included in the surtax.

Morgenthau Plan Ahead

Further simplification of the schedule is expected when the committee considers Secretary Morgenthau's plan to permit taxpayers earning less than $3000 to file a special return that can be filled out by reference to a table of taxes.

Although the committee ruled out joint income tax returns, by a voice vote, it instructed the Treasury by a 13 to 5 vote to draft an amendment to eliminate tax advantages now enjoyed by residents of eight community propery.

Residents of these States, originally targets of the joint return proposal, now may legally divide their income for income tax purposes, regardless of whether one or both spouses earn it. By filing separate returns, they may remain out of a higher surtax bracket.

The Senate provision withdraws this privilege. The spouse actually earning the income must file tax returns on it, nor can a husband controlling property from which income is derived split that income with his wife for tax purposes.

Sales Tax Rejected, 12 to 5

The attempt to substitute a general manufacturers' sales tax for the present selective system of excises was made by Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan. It was rejected, 12 to 5. The move for a salary withholding tax went out on a voice vote.

While both the sales tax and withholding tax were barred from the bill, which is being confined to the House tax framework, committee spokesmen said consideration of one or both of the proposals might come in a subsequent measure.

Hurrying action, in an effort to lay the bill before the Senate September 2, the committee today will consider the Treasury's controversial plan to tax excess profits on the basis of invested capital. The committee is believed inclined to the House plan, which gives taxpayers the option of basing excess profits taxes on average earnings.

A battle on excise taxes will follow, with one committee group seeking to heighten excises on tobacco, beer and gasoline. Higher taxes on all three were recommended by the Treasury but were discarded by the House.

Japanese Say Churchill Lied, Add Nothing Can Stop Drive South

Prime Minister's Remarks on Peace Untrue, Press Says

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (Tuesday), Aug. 26.—Koh Ishii, cabinet information bureau spokesman, today said his government would welcome negotiations with the United States to ease friction in the Far East "if we can come to a reasonable conclusion," but the press defiantly declared nothing would halt the southward surge of this empire.

He made the statement in answer to queries at a press conference.

The spokesman did not deny that the Japanese Ambassador Kichisaburo Nomura and Secretary of State Hull in Washington already had held informal conversations aimed at soothing relations, Ishii merely said:

"I am not informed."

In answering a question concerning the British-Russian invasion of Iran, Shii said:

"The peace-loving American Nation must have been shocked by this unprovoked act."

The Japanese press earlier had charged that Prime Minister Churchill of Britain lied about British and United States efforts to keep peace with Japan in his broadcast speech Sunday.

The entire press attacked Churchill's promise of aid to the United States if attempts to stop Japan's expansion were not accomplished peacefully.

The conservative newspaper Nichi Nichi said that instead of trying to keep peace, Britain and the United States were disturbing the peace of Asia by aid the Chiang Kai-chek regime.

"What Churchill said about peaceful settlement is nothing but a big lie," the newspaper declared.

"Britain must terminate her anti-Japanese activities immediately. Japan is determined to eliminate all obstacles to her southward advance.

Nomura Criticized

In an apparently inspired story, the Domei Agency represented Churchill's broadcast yesterday as based on a misinterpretation of the facts. It said Japan had the "full cooperation" of China (the puppet Wang Ching-Wei regime) in reconstruction, that Indo-China was not taken by force because there was an agreement with Vichy, and that Japan had not aped Hitler or Mussolini—because the Chinese war started first.

Two newspapers, Hochi and the militaristic Kokumin, tied up comments on the Churchill speech with criticism of Admiral Nomura, ambassador to Washington, for telling correspondents in Washington Saturday that the gap in policy between the United States and Japan might be bridged.

Hochi said Japanese might respect the intentions of Nomura, who made his statement after an interview with Secretary of State Hull, but that they must not lose their determination to face the situation.

Kokumin said the Japanese had been more than patient toward Britain and the United States, and added:

"We should know that the present deadlocked relations of Japan, Britain and the United States cannot be ironed out with these interviews."

Kokumin pictured Churchill's address as propaganda to estrange Japan from Thailand and cause a split in the Axis camp by saying that American - Japanese negotiations were under way.

Chinese Fear Appeasement

Chungking, (Tuesday), Aug. 26 (AP).—Prime Minister Churchill's disclosure that the United States was trying to obtain a settlement with Japan stirred Chinese fears of an Asiatic appeasement, possibly at China's expense.

Authoritative statements, however, expressed confidence of the government that any settlement would be within the framework of the nine-power treaty pledging respect for Chinese territory and soversignty.

Conditions of Peace Emphasized by Hull

Secretary of State Hull yesterday issued another reminder to Japan that any peace settlement must be based on the fundamental principles that this Government has proclaimed for years.

Many Troops, Fliers Land At Singapore

By the Associated Press

Singapore, Aug. 25.—Strong R. A. F. groups, Indian infantry and artillery units and a 306-man medical detachment landed today to reinforce Britain's already formidable Malayan bases, emphasizing a declaration of Prime Minister Churchill that Japanese aggression "has got to stop."

The largest single body of Royal Air Force personnel to arrive in more than a year poured down the gangplanks at this naval bastion to help man the empire's expanding string of bomber and fighter bases in the Far East.

Indian troops were landed at strategic points upon the narrow Malayan peninsula between the Bay of Bengal and the Gulf of Siam to the north, the land bridge between Singapore and the Asiatic continent which Japan regards as in her sphere of influence.

The debarkation scenes, reminiscent of the landing of an Australian expeditionary force many thousands strong last February 18 and later arrival of other Australian and R. A. F. detachments, came only a few hours after a radio broadcast by Prime Minister Churchill pledging that Britain would support the United States if efforts failed "to secure a peaceful settlement."

One great liner docked here after a 10,000-mile voyage from the United Kingdom. The newcomers included Australian airmen from the Middle East.

Accompanying the troopships most of the way was a force of war craft so powerful that one flier declared:

"I bet old Winston didn't have a better escort when he went to meet Roosevelt."

The President's Day

By International News Service

SCENE STEALER: The tall, dark and handsome Duke of Kent stole the show from the President yesterday morn when the Roosevelt special pulled into the station, was switched off on another track while Mr. Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt, the Duke and Wing Comdr. Sir Louis Greig finished breakfast. Slim and neat-waisted in a light khaki R. A. F. uniform, trimmed with dark blue and glittering with the gold winged insignia of the British airbirds, the King's kid brother got all the gapes from the roped-off crowds.

PARTING OF WAYS: After the Duke had shaken hands with the welcoming top-notchers of both the United States and Great Britain armed forces in this country, and taken off for Norfolk, the President descended with Mrs. Roosevelt and was whirled away to the White House. First callers were the Congressional big four, with a substitute player, Cliff Woodrum, representing the absent Speaker Rayburn. Senator Tom Connally, Majority Leader Barkley, Vice President Wallace, et al., talked for some time with the boss on matters legislative, filed out with not much to say.

HOT AND COLD running ambassadors: First appointment at the executive offices brought Lincoln McVeagh, former Ambassador to Greece, in for final instructions from Roosevelt before taking off for his new post in the chill of Iceland. Second Diplomatic Corps member to call was Willys Peck, who came at noon to say goodby, get the Presidential blessing before taking off for the hot spot of the Far East—Thailand—as United States Minister.

BILLS AND SUCH: Up to the Senate went the appointment of Francis Biddle as Attorney General, a signed bill on supplementary defense appropriations to the tune of seven billions, a veto of the farm bill. Secretary Hull shared desk-side lunch with the President.

DUCAL DINNER: Back from Norfolk at 5:15 came Kent to be met by Maj. Gen. "Pa" Watson all done up in his regimentals. Genial "Pa" whisked the duke from under the gathering of austere noses, took him up to the officers club at Bolling Field for a little whistle-wetting. At 8 p. m., the assembled guests—Ronald Ian Campbell, acting British Ambassador; Lord and Lady Mountbatten, Wing Comdr. Sir Louis Greig, J. A. Lowther, Maj. Gen. Henry Arnold, Rear Admiral and Mrs. John Towers, Mrs. Cameron Clark, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Field, Harry Hopkins, the Nelson Rockefellers and the James Roosevelts filed into the smaller White House dining room in the wake of the President and the royal guest-of-honor. On the damask spread, crystal-and silver-set table were huge sterling bowls of English pink roses, maidenhair fern and crested place cards.

Sidelights of the War

3 Fast-Talking Newscasters Foil German Radio's Kibitzer

London, Aug. 25 (AP).—The German radio used three fast-talking news announcers in place of one tonight and kept a mystery kibitzer of the air from getting a word in edgewise.

Recently the kibitzer, speaking on the same wavelength as the German domestic programs, has scolded the Reich with such statements as "this is all lies" whenever the German announcer paused between items.

Tonight, however, London listeners heard three separate announcers read so rapidly that it was almost impossible to understand them. Loud, martial music drowned out the final words of the program.

Axis Parley Predicted

New York, Aug. 25 (INS).—A forthcoming meeting of "the highest Axis leaders" was predicted tonight by the official Tokyo radio, which said the conference probably would be held within the next few days.

The leaders—presumably of Japan, as well as Germany and Italy—"will discuss the political and economic cooperation of their allied nations and the general war situation. A joint statement by both Chancellor Hitler of Germany and Premier Mussolini of Italy "may be issued about the meeting," it was said.

London Food Ample

London, Aug. 25.—London's food stocks were larger today than they have been for the last 12 months, W. G. Korby, divisional food officer, revealed today.

"In addition to the usual stocks," said Kirby, "I have under control six of the most important commodities that will provide rations and, in some cases, double rations for 100 per cent of the population for two weeks in any emergency."

Marine May Lose Foot After Injury At Silver Spring

Private George Evantush, 21, attached to the Marine Corps at Quantico, Va., suffered an injury that may cost him his left foot yesterday when a Baltimore & Ohio train ran over it in front of the Silver Spring (Md.) Station.

The victim, who was in custody of an officer, was returning to Quantico from his home in Girard, Ohio. Evantush told the Montgomery County police that he stepped off the eastbound train when it stopped at the station. It had started and he was getting aboard when he slipped and fell partly under the moving train.

The rescue squad of the Silver Spring Volunteer Fire Department took Evantush to Walter Reed Hospital.

14 Ships Dock Out of 21 Nazis Reported Sunk

By the Associated Press

Lisbon, Aug. 25.—Fourteen British merchantmen arrived in this neutral port today with thanks to a lone American-made plane for their survival out of a convoy of 20 ships and a tug harassed in a 4-day running attack by German planes and U-boats off Spain.

The survivors arrived as embodied evidence to offset the widely quoted Sunday claim of the German high command that 21 merchant ships totaling 122,000 tons and three of their naval guardians had been sunk out of a Gibraltar-bound convoy.

Catalina Saved Day

Six of the surviving sea captains told how U-boats sank six of the merchantmen, the ocean-going tug Empire Oak and a corvette in night attacks while a single Catalina flying boat beat off daylight as- The convoy captains, asserted that the German bombers failed to sink a single ship, mainly because of the thorough work of the Catalina and its crew.

Submarines hammering at the convoy after darkness, however, were said to have gotten the tug, the escorting gun-boat and the merchantmen Stork, Ciscar, Aguila, Alvia, Clonlara and Spind.

It was not known here how many of the survivors were rescued.

The captains said they were first attacked by planes about 400 miles off the Spanish coast last Tuesday.

"The German planes kept well off," one weather-beaten skipper asserted, "because the big Catalina flying boat circled right above the convoy. When the Germans came near the Catalina, although outnumbered, dived on them and they scattered, dropping theirbombs in the sea."

Tuesday and Wednesday nights German submarines attacked from both sides of the convoy, sinking two ships and the tug, it was said, and the following day planes renewed the attack fruitlessly.

Friday and Saturday nights, the captains said, the submarines attacked again, getting the four additional merchant ships and the corvette.

Menuhin Denies Draft Appeal

San Jose, Calif., Aug. 25 (AP).—Yehudi Menuhin, young violinist, was back home from a South American concert tour today, depressed, he said, by an erroneous report that he had appealed to Washington for deferred classification in the draft.

On his return he found that the Los Gatos Draft Board, on its own motion, had placed him in 3-A classification, reserved for men with dependents. An earlier temporary ruling had placed him in the 1-A group, subject to call. Menuhin, married, with two children, said he never had made any appeal or protest because of the 1-A rating. Yehudi said his position always has been that "if my country needs me, I shall be glad to serve."

Morale Begins With Civilians, Patterson Says

Philadelphia, Aug. 25 (AP).—Robert P. Patterson, Undersecretary of War, said tonight that whenever civilian morale is low "all the needling in the world will not raise the level of soldier morale."

"Morale, like charity, should begin at home," Patterson said. "If civilian morale is higher, soldier morale will look after itself."

Patterson addressed the national encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

He said the Nation would begin to develop a national morale when the people "begin to appreciate the fact that our national existence is menaced and that we must pay a stiff price in money and comfort, if in nothing else, to assure its safety."

Earlier Former Ambassador Joseph E. Davies said that the United States "will underwrite a terrible risk" if it "follows the counsel of isolationists," if it sponsors a peace with Hitler.

"We will be taking a terrible gamble that is not common sense," the former envoy to Russia and Belgium declared.

'Blue Army' Fends Off 'Red' Encirclement

By Richard C. Hottelet
United Press Staff Writer

With the Second Army in Arkansas, Aug. 25.—"Suicide" detachments of the Blue Army today stood off numerically superior forces of the advancing Red Army from the South, while the main units of the Seventh Army Corps staged a strategic withdrawal, south of Terre Rouge Creek.

The withdrawing Blue forces (never "retreating") were enacting what is perhaps the hardest maneuver of modern warfare, the orderly removal of an army to better defense positions, at the same time maintaining contact among divisions and regiments, keeping up communication lines and avoiding chaos in complete blackout.

Fighting Encirclement

The Blue forces fought all morning to stem the Red advance in Southwest Arkansas. There were eight divisions in the "enemy" army and, after a stand in which the invaders continued to advance, the Blue forces elected to withdraw to save themselves from encirclement and probable annihilation.

The "last man" detachments used heavy armaments of automatic infantry weapons, light artillery and antitank guns to fend off as long as possible the enemy's mechanized forces.

High Army officials emphasized that withdrawals in modern warfare must be accomplished at predetermined speed, over planned routes. Each unit follows an individual time table and failure of one tank crew to follow instructions might jam the entire maneuver. The withdrawing forces used only half of the roads, the other half being kept open for mobile reserves to be used in counterattacking or in fending off advance enemy forces.

130,000 Advancing Against 60,000 'Blues'

By Leon Kay
United Press Staff Writer

With the Third Army advancing into Arkansas, Aug. 25.—Quick-striking mechanized forces today launched the Third Army on a gigantic offensive drive aimed at encirclement of the Second Army's forces in southwest Arkansas.

Alert reconnaisance patrols of the Second Army prevented the northern or Blue forces from being taken by surprise. However, the advancing Red Army, moving into land blacked out by the defending forces, scarcely was retarded in its lightning drive as the troops made contact.

The skirmishes marked the second phase of the war games which pit 130,000 Red soldiers against 60,000 defending Blue men.

Nondefense Economies Spiked on Point of Order

do not sit down with the Budget and with the Treasury, I do not think we will ever get anywhere."

MORGENTHAU had put his finger on the heart of the spending problem. The Appropriations committees write the money bills without regard to the taxing committees (Ways and Means in the House and Finance in the Senate). Putting it another way, the taxing committees must raise money appropriated, without any say as to spending. When either attempts to reconcile Government income with outgo, it is "not germane" to the bill in hand.

Like Morgenthau, the late Senator Pat Harrison saw this. He proposed joint committee action, passed it through the Senate, and it died in the House. Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, proposed joint Appropriations and Ways and Means sessions. He never got to first base.

The two committees today are just where they were, poles apart on functions and powers. Which explains why Disney's motion for a $1,800,000,000 nondefense economy rider on the tax bill went out on a point.

Nettled by Morgenthau's call for a billion dollar saving and Republican suggestions that two billion dollars be saved, Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee on August 1 replied with a phrase of the late Speaker Joe Cannon:

"The boys are doing a lot of thundering in the index, but they won't perform much in the text."

TAYLOR said Congress had cut nondefense appropriations $342,662,006 under 1941 and called that "commendable." A billion dollar cut? Here's how Taylor argued it couldn't or wouldn't be made:

"Total nondefense appropriations for the fiscal year 1942 are $7,145,000,000 in round figures. Of this amount the sum of $3,786,000,000, or 53 per cent, is due to fixed charges such as interest on the National debt, debt retirement, veteran's benefits, social security, and other grants and expenses, and so forth, and cuts cannot be applied to those definitely fixed charges.

But One Cut Was Germane, In Defense

"Deducting this amount of $3,786,000,000 from the $7,145,000,000 leaves $3,359,000,000 of nondefense appropriations that are not definitely fixed charges. If a billion dollars is to be cut from this $3,359,000,000 it is equivalent to a 30 per cent reduction. I doubt if many members would vote for that reduction."

Disney's proposal, never permitted to come to a vote, met the problem head on, NOT by slashing all civil funds horizontally but by singling out the "nonessentials" and cutting them deep.

In his unsuccessful Ways and Means Committee maneuver, Disney proposed:

General public works budgeted at $502,900,000—cut to two hundred and fifty million dollars.

Legislative, executive and judicial appropriations, budgeted at $41,300,000—lop off $300,000.

Now it all totaled up to a $1,800,000,000 cut, but it didn't get past that point of order. If it had, Congress probably would have licked it, for these are funds dear to most members' hearts.

Just to keep the record straight, Congress did get around to a 597 million dollars saving in mid-August. But it wasn't made in nondefense expenditures. It came on the Army's special ordnance estimates for reserve supplies of tanks, antitank and antiaircraft guns, artillery equipment and ammunition. The Senate wanted to lop off $1,347,000,000—the entire item. It put 750 million dollars of this back when Secretary Stimson said all of it was needed for the safety of the Nation itself if war comes.

So Congress, after all, hung out an economy shingle.

That 597-million-dollar defense cut was germane!

TOMORROW—Labor Goes Blind.

Habinyak Term Is Reduced To Three Years

Acting with unusual speed, the War Department yesterday slashed Private John Habinyak's sentence for insubordination from ten years and nine months to three years.

Robert P. Patterson, Acting Secretary of War, reduced the court-martial sentence less than three days after the verdict was taken under consideration by a special board of review in the Judge Advocate General's Department.

The original sentence, criticized both in Congress and by the public for its severity, had "amazed" veteran officials in the War Department and its modification had been predicted freely. Army sources said the sentence was the maximum possible and had rarely been imposed.

Can Get Out in 30 Months

Officials said that if Habinyak's prison behavior was good, he would be released in 30 months—the maximum military service provided for draftees by the revised Selective Service law. Habinyak will serve the time in the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

Inducted last June 23, Habinyak was assigned to the First Field Artillery Training Regiment at Fort Bragg, N. C., and by July 4 he was in trouble with his superior officers for refusal to clean his mess kit. Subsequently, the former Central City, Pa., coal miner, was accused specifically of spitting on the mess room floor; refusing to clean up around his bed and refusing to pick up concrete particles littering the road. He was convicted on those charges but Col. Charles B. Elliott, the commanding officer, disapproved another which accused Habinyak of willfully refusing to stand at attention.

Shifted From Atlanta

A report of the court-martial quoted the prisoner as saying, in explanation of his conduct, that he had earned $10 a day in civilian life and was not going to work in the Army for $21 a month.

At first the court-martial ordered Habinyak to serve his sentence at hard labor in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, but this was changed later to provide for his incarceration at Fort Leavenworth.

Patterson suspended the court-martial's order for Habinyak's dishonorable discharge until his release from prison, and officials explained that this would make possible his restoration to duty, should he not serve the full sentence and if his conduct justified additional clemency.

R. A. F. Attacks Wireless Station

London, Aug. 25 (AP).—Three R. A. F. spitfire fighters attacked a wireless station near Cherbourg tonight with machine gun and cannon fire. The air ministry said they caused a violent explosion which enveloped the station in white smoke. The planes were reported to have dived within 400 feet of the ground to silence a German machine gun.

German daylight raiders made a few stabs at the British east coast but an official statement said they caused little damage.

British bombers were heard roaring over the Strait of Dover late tonight. A few minutes later the French coast from Dunkerque to Boulogne was lit by exploding "flaming onion" antiaircraft shells, tracer bullets and the searchlights of German ground defenses.

U. S. Listening Post Discerns Axis Plans From Changes in Propaganda Tune

Copyright by New York Times

The United States received the first "tipoff" that Germany was about to attack Russia and that Japan intended to occupy Indo-China through the operation of its newest intelligence service—the listening-posts of the foreign broadcast monitoring service.

This was revealed yesterday by the Federal Communications Commission which described the special national defense units it is operating. The commission stated that "altered tone of certain foreign broadcasts gave the first indication" that the two events would transpire.

The monitoring service is now actively translating, transcribing, analyzing and reporting on from 800,000 to 900,000 words transmitted daily by foreign broadcast stations throughout the world. Working three shifts, 24 hours a day seven days a week, a special force of technicians, translators, analysts and other experts carefully watch foreign broadcasts for intelligence and trends, which are reported immediately to Federal officials responsible for counterpropaganda or other action.

Federal Communications Commission officials said that the importance of listening in is attested by the fact that all propaganda instigated abroad almost invariably follows the example set in short-wave broadcasts, but follows it with a lag. Consequently it is necessary for our Government to have knowledge of the short-wave "model."

Experience of the listening posts indicates that almost every political, diplomatic or military move is presaged by propaganda. Consequently, through a study of propaganda trends it is often possible to predict such moves.

This is the process by which the monitoring service intercepts and analyzes the foreign broadcasts:

Four listening posts of the FCC's national defense operations section are exclusively tuned to foreign broadcasts. They are so located that each may hear transmissions from a particular part of the world. Thus the post at Portland, Ore., concerns itself with the Orient; another at Kingsville, Tex., covers Latin America; the third at Santurce, Puerto Rico, watches eastern European trends, while the fourth at Guilford, Md., covers the rest of Europe and all of Africa and the Near East.

Hot Flashes Speeded

Information thought significant is flashed immediately to appropriate Government officials. Other information is dispatched to a selected list of military and other Government officials in the form of spot bulletins, daily reports with overall content and analyses, weekly summaries of propaganda methods on the long-range basis, and special reports and analyses in particular matters.

Bell Aircraft Gets $75,215,384 Order

The War Department yesterday announced award of a $75,218,384 contract to Bell Aircraft Corporation, Buffalo, N. Y., for airplanes and spare parts.

While no details were given as to the number of planes the contract covered, on the basis of cost per plane of several months ago the sum probably would purchase about 2000 ships.

The contract, it was understood, raised the backlog of United States and British orders to about 175 million dollars.

Davis Warns Owners and Labor Not to Capitalize on Emergency

Mediation Board's Chairman Explains Position in Kearny

Forestalling an eruption of union demands for maintenance of membership guarantees, National Defense Mediation Board Chairman William H. Davis yesterday insisted that the defense emergency "shouldn't be used to tear down or build up."

Discussing the board's recent recommendation that such a clause be granted to strikers at the Federal Shipbuilding & Drydock Co., Kearny, N. J., Davis said that unions should not strike for a closed shop because they believe they stand a better chance of obtaining it due to the "great emergency." He added that companies should not refuse demands for union security "just because they think the union won't strike through fear of public opinion."

It was learned that some board quarters fear the recommendations in the Kearny strike—supported by the President, who ordered the Navy to seize the plant when the management declined to accept the board proposal—may set off a train of union demands, or even strikes, for a closed shop or a maintenance of membership clause.

Apparently sharing this concern, Davis took pains at a special press conference yesterday to point out that an agreement was reached without a maintenance of membership guarantee in the Todd Galveston Drydocks, Inc., case, where 1850 workers had conducted a four-week strike.

The Need for Security

Davis implied that the board did not indiscriminately recommend the union security guarantee, but only in cases where such security was jeopardized or threatened. There was no threat in the Galveston dispute, he implied.

In the Kearny strike, on the other hand, Davis alluded to "what might be the destructive effect of the two-year stabilization agreement" among Atlantic Coast shipyards. In this agreement the union will renounce its strike rights and will make no further demands on the company for the two-year duration of the agreement.

Deprived of such weapons, Davis hinted, the union needed guarantees against "a great mass of new members and the prospect of great expansion" of employment.

From other board sources, it was learned that the principles which have guided in the board in determining when a maintenance of membership agreement, or some other form of union security, should be recommended, are:

1. When the company is or has been demonstrably "anti-union."
2. When the original union nucleus is threatened with inundation by new employes.
3. When the established union is subject to future "raiding" by other organizations, particularly craft units which may hold out the offer of higher pay categories.

The latter two considerations, it was believed, were present in the Federan Shipbuilding case.

Asked about a message from the Federal company's president, L. H. Korndorff, addressed to the shipyard workers and appearing yesterday in the Wall Street Journal and other papers, Davis said he was "delighted" to see that Korndorff recommended that "animosity be put aside."

Commends Lindley Piece

Davis declined to comment on Korndorff's declaration that the company refused to agree to the dismissal of "old, faithful employes" who did not keep in good union standing. Davis pointed out that he issued a statement last week on this matter, and that his statement still stood.

He declared, however, that an analysis of the strike and its background by Ernest Lindley in yesterday's Post "was an excellent presentation." Lindley had pointed out the board's contention that the maintenance of membership guarantee was not an undue restriction on any employe, union or nonunion, and that Government circles agreed in assessing the fault as the company's.

Making clear that each case before the board was handled on its own merits, Davis said the apparent inconsistency in the Kearny and the Galveston decisions actually conformed "to a higher consistency" of obtaining "the best possible agreement for a particular situation."

Welles Warns Latin America On Resources

Sumner Welles, Undersecretary of State, warned Latin America last night to conserve supplies of essential raw materials.

He also embraced a suggestion that in effect would keep open all Latin American ports to the United States if this country became a belligerent in the war abroad.

Welles spoke over a domestic and short-wave radio hookup in honor of Uruguayan Independence Day.

He promised no discrimination in the doling out of supplies by the United States to its sister republics in this hemisphere. Goods of which the United States is the sole or chief supplier will be made available on an equal basis "to the people of the other American republics as liberally as they are to the people of this country," said Welles.

He praised a proposal by Dr. Alberto Guani, Uruguayan minister of foreign affairs, that the American republics decide jointly not to treat a belligerent any nation of the Americas that might be forced into war with a non-American nation.

The effect of this, said Welles, "would be to make the port facilities of all the American Republics available to the public vessels of all American nations engaged in the defense of the continent."

U. S. Help Asked In Maj. Tucker Death Inquiry

Los Angeles, Aug. 25 (AP).—District Attorney John Dockweiler today telegraphed Secretary of War Stimson for aid in investigating the knife death of Maj. George A. Tucker, Fort MacArthur battalion commander.

Maj. Tucker, wounded at his San Pedro home, died July 12 at Letterman General Hospital, San Francisco. First reports were that he stabbed himself accidentally while slicing bread.

The district attorney's office said police investigated the case after receiving reports that the knife was too dull to have inflicted a fatal wounds in the incision; that a party that there were three critical wounds in th incision, that a party was held at the Tucker home the night of the fatal injury.

7-Billion Arms Bill Is Signed By Roosevelt

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt signed into law yesterday legislation providing $7,586,896,948 for the Nation's defense effort.

The measure appropriates $6,586,896,948 for new Army tanks, antitank weapons and ammunition, and for expansion of the Naval establishment.

It also appropriates $698,650,000 for the Maritime Commission's ship acquisition and construction program, plus an additional one billion-dollar contract authorization for that work.

The War Department will get about $3,400,000,000 for ammunition and special ordnance items to modernize the Army and 800 million dollars more for radio equipment, searchlights and a supply of reserve materials for the Air Corps.

A fund of $2,500,000 was made available to the President for special defense expenditures he saw fit to authorize without further Congressional approval.

For the Navy, the measure provided $294,528,500 for doezns of new shore stations, 380 million dollars for material for new ships, 369 million dollars to build up materiel reserves and about 260 million dollars for expansion of the Navy and Marine Corps personnel.

Pact Ends Restaurant Strike in San Francisco

San Francisco, Aug. 25 (AP).—The A. F. of L. Culinary Workers Union and operators of 66 downtown San Francisco restaurants signed an agreement today, ending a 46-day tieup.

The five-year contract described by both parties as a master agreement guaranteeing no lockouts, strikes or work stoppages in at least 121 restaurants, was signed by representatives of the Culinary Workers and Bartenders Union and the San Francisco Employers' Council, representing the San Francisco Culinary Employers Conference.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, soon they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

President Vetoes Bill to Bar Sale of U. S.-Owned Cotton And Wheat Unless Specifically Authorized by Congress

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday a measure prohibiting the Government from marketing its loan stocks of 6 million bales of cotton and nearly 300 million bushels of wheat until authorized by Congress.

Farm-minded members had pushed the bill through Congress with the design as assuring cotton and wheat farmers higher prices for their crops this year. They contended that the possibility of release of these stocks had a depressing effect on the market. One of this group, Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, accused Administration officials of "breaking the cotton market" by talking of releasing stocks.

But Mr. Roosevelt declared that "in my judgment, this bill is contrary to sound governmental policy and the long-time best interests of both farmers and consumers."

He went on to say "in times such as these no one can foresee how soon this Government-owned stock may be needed" and added:

"The goal of the Administration's agricultural policy has been parity prices for the farmers, and this has been accepted by the producers, consumers and the Congress as fair and reasonable. I do not feel that farmers would wish this acceptance destroyed by action designed to force prices above parity through the arbitrary withholding of Government-owned stocks from the normal channels of trade and commerce."

Parity is the price at which a farm commodity has the same purchasing power in terms of things farmers buy as it had in the 1909-1914 period.

Cotton parity is figure by the Agriculture Department now as about 18.49 cents a pound, and wheat parity at about $1.18 a bushel.

The President's veto caused a dip in prices of cotton and wheat on commodity markets, but they quickly rallied.

The House must act first on the veto and leaders said it would not be brought up there until after September 15.

In addition to his criticism of the bill's general aim, the President objected also to a section which would have permitted farmers to grow wheat in excess of their farm acreage allotments for 1941 provided they use it as feed on the farm.

"This provision," the President said, "would place a premium on noncompliance with the wheat program, constitute a breach of faith with the large majority of farmers who complied with the program, and so relax the control features of the farm program as to adversely affect future participation therein."

The Deadline Approaches For Subscription Season

Unprecedented Year Promised Guild Plays; The Army Entertainers Are Marching; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

WASHINGTON'S PROCRASTINATING PLAYGOERS are going to pay the penalty of their dilly-dallying, if they don't watch out. We are sounding the warning again—probably for the last time—and for good and sufficient reasons.

ERROL FLYNN

Balcony seats for the Theater Guild-American Theater Society subscription season at the National are sold out, except for a few—very few, I am told—rear balcony seats for the Wednesday matinees. Excellent seat locations remain in the orchestra for all performances, but they are going rapidly, too, there being practically nothing else available. It therefore exceedingly behooves those desirous of getting in on the bargain subscription rates to shake a leg. It might even be a good idea to shake both legs.

There is no spoofing about this. The paid-up subscription list, as of this writing—and I hope reading—numbers in excess of 4600, and the first subscription play, Maxwell Anderson's "Candle in the Wind," starring Helen Hayes, under Alfred Lunt's direction, still is approximately six weeks away. But the deadline for signing on the perforation is not. As I recall it, it is necessary to get under the wire by September 1 or get left.

In passing, it will interest many Washingtonians to know that prominently mentioned in the cast of "Candle in the Wind" is Leona Roberts, erstwhile member of the Capital's one-time Rams Head Players. There are those among us who remember that Leona Roberts is the mother of Josephine Hutchinson—and whatever became of her?—and a "character woman" of the first rank. Else what would she be doing in the Helen Hayes company?

Man With Whiskers Profits in "Props"

The low-pressure chamber and other highly technical flight surgery equipment built by studio technicians for Warner Brothers' Technicolor production of "Dive Bomber," opening Friday at the Earle will be going into active service soon. All such equipment, except that on loan from the Wright Field laboratories at Dayton, Ohio, and from Pasadena's California Tech, is being turned over to the Government as rapidly as it is cleared out of the Errol Flynn-Fred MacMurray starring picture. All of the devices and instruments used in the film are practical and perfect, according to report. The United States Navy experts, under Commanders J. R. Poppen, Medical Corps, Washington, and Seth Turner and Charles Brown, of the flight branch, saw to that.

We certainly wasted a lot of time and sympathy a while back, being sorry that Ann Miller apparently found herself without a job after having done so much to enliven "Too Many Girls." Our lamentations had hardly got cold in type when Columbia up and signed her to a two-pictures-a-year contract, with the privilege of outside commitments. On the strength of the "rushes" on "Go West, Young Lady," in which she is featured, Columbia now has torn up that first paper and given her a long-term document calling for exclusive services. Hereafter, we shall confine our jeremiads to being sorry for ourself. Boy, what a field!

Andrew R. Kelley, veteran dramatic editor and critic, now is serving as Press Information Specialist in the office of the chief of the Morale Division of the War Department, and at the moment is concentrating on the Camp Meade "Snap It Up Again" production, directed by Gene Ford, of the Capitol Theater. This sequel to Meade's "Snap It Up," of the First World War, is due to play the Capital September 11, 12 and 13, presumably in Central High School Auditorium. Promises to be quite a show . . . Tomorrow night, Harry S. Bell's "Yard Bird Revue," first of the training camp productions sponsored by the entertainment committee of the District Council of Defense, will be given its public preview at Central . . . Harry Anger's unit, now titled "Marching Along," will hold its first dress rehearsal at Central Thursday night and Phil Hayden's "Jest-Rite Jamboree" will hold an "all-out" rehearsal in his studio on Dupont Circle also on Thursday night. Phil is still in the market for a coupla novelty acts and a brace of first-class, A No. 1, ne plus ultra piano accompanists. As you were.

The Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Md., is cooking up another "sneak" preview for Thursday night at 8. . . . Not a mystery play nor yet a thriller; just a swell picture—they hope. . . . Today, Sidney Lust's Bethesda Theater is continuing the premiere presentation of "Poison Pen," starring Flora Robson and Robert Newton. . . . And Dave Ginsberg, of the Lust organization, is in Tampa, Fla., reaping the rewards of his "Woman's Face" campaign. . . . My thanks to Cecil B. DeMille for the piece of the birthday cake that was whacked up on his recent sixtieth birthday. . . . But very rich for our senemia. . . . And another bundle of gratitude to Irene Dunne, Robert Montgomery and Preston Foster for the leather "Unfinished Business" pocket memorandum book, with our name on it in gold. . . . What do we care if their next picture is called "Unfinished Business?" . . . We have plenty of it to worry about.

A Sentimental Softie!

Hollywood, Aug. 25 (INS).—The socially conscious John Steinbeck is coming down from his pedestal long enough to earn some RKO money. He will adapt his own short stories, "The Red Pony" and "The Long Valley," and these tales are as unlike "Grapes of Wrath" and "Of Mice and Men" as night and day. They feature a little boy and his pony and are sentimental and tender. Lewis Milestone, who directed "Of Mice and Men" and who will direct and produce "The Red Pony," as the combined stories will be called, was responsible for Steinbeck's accepting this offer.

Within a year blond Stirling has become a star. He has good looks, charm, virility, and, when he has the experience of a few more pictures, will rank with the top actors. While Hayden has been costarred with Madeline Carroll in "Bahama Passage," he has never been given a chance to solo until now. I say now, because Paramount has bought a Ben Ames sea story especially for him. Ames, a Boston newspaperman, who writes of New England, is particularly good for Hayden, who hails from Cape Cod. In the Williams story he will play an adventurous young man who has an international reputation as a daring skipper.

Just had a little flash of the subject matter of the new Ernst Lubitsch picture, "To Be or Not To Be." Seems it's a German "Ninotchka," with Hitler and the Nazi gang kidded. Remember how the Communists were taken for a ride in the Greta Garbo movie? Well, Ernst has been on the Alex Korda lot, interviewing actors for the role of Hitler—a comedy Hitler, as you may suspect. There were about 20 would-be Adolfs out there today, all of them goose-stepping and heil hitlering to beat the band. Funnily enough, most of these Hitlers looked like the little tramp Charlie Chaplin played years ago, moustache and all. . . . Alex flew out to New York to see his wife, Merle Oberon, who is still there, and carried her the good word about the reviews she got for "Lydia."

There will be those who will stigmatize it as a piece of sheer propaganda for the British. There will be others who will perceive in its sturdy defense of the individual freedoms a strong endorsement of this country's foreign policy. The interventionists will love it. The isolationists will not.

But what Frederick Hazlitt Brennan has written in "The Wookey" is not so much a commentary on the present war as it is a keen and cumulatively dramatic and compelling analysis of the mind, the heart and the aspirations of free men, of any time in any country, who cherish home, family and the right to direct their own meager destinies enough to fight for them against brutal and overwhelming odds. It is a drama of freedom and its defiance of slavery, executed in broad strokes of simple honesty, rough humor and gentle pathos.

The author has taken as his symbol of the "little people," who comprise the strength or weakness of any nation, Mr. Horace Wookey, who has risen from garbageman to tugboat capain and bargeman, dealing in scrap iron and heavy hauling on the Thames and the Channel, and lives in his little castle in the East End dock area of London. Mr. Wookey, "The Wookey," is a gruff little Cockney of independent thought and speech, wholly out of sympathy with his government. He is a great man to his family and his associates along the waterfront by the very courage of his convictions, bred from his experience in the First World War and his contemplation of the egregious blunders made by those in high places since. He will have none of the Second World War, due to be declared the day after the action of the play opens. Then comes Dunkirk and his refusal to ferry reenforcements across the Channel but immediate willingness to help when he realizes it is an evacuation that is going on.

Bombers Turn the Trick

And then come the bombers to his own island and to his own home and with them the conviction that here is something that transcends petty politics and personal prejudices and strikes at the very roots of civilization. Mr. Wookey becomes a hard man to stop.

Into this evolution of the "common man" have been woven the controversial topics of complete compliance with seemingly silly governmental edicts, evacuation of the family to safer ground, the snuffing out of family dissentions and the right to protect what one owns by such means as seem best to the individual. Mr. Wooky writes some pretty brisk letters to the Prime Minister, suffers some pretty stiff rebuffs and achieves more than one minor triumph. When a heavily accented German voice is heard on the Paris radio, admonishing all of England to learn its lesson from Poland and give up before it is too late, Mr. Wookey is on his way up the stairs from his basement dugout—all that is left of his castle—with a cartridge belt over each shoulder and a machine gun in his arms.

The scent, to be sure, is England and the characters all are English—all but the lone Irishman who loves The Wookey's daughter—but it is all a little too fundamental to be dismissed by the abused and abusive word "propaganda". Furthermore, it is sound, forceful and gripping entertainment, admirably played by a splendid cast and given intense realism by Jo Mielziner's helpful settings and the reproduction of all the terrifying tumults of a blitzkreig.

Leading Roles Superlatively Played

Edmund Gwenn's performance in the title role is an engrossing blending of stern authority and infinite tenderness. He knows his own mind and speaks it bluntly to great and small alike. Those about him know his heart. The spiritual fiber of the man is masterfully encompassed. The principal objects of his concern are his wife, his daughter and his son, portrayed respectively by Norah Howard, Heather Angel and George Sturgeon. The cast is especially fortunate in the presence of Miss Angel and Master Sturgeon, the former scoring one of the evening's decisive successes as the nerve-wracked "coward" of the family, who was its greatest heroine. As Aunt Gen, the music hall artiste, who has so much to do with the motivation of the play, Carol Goodner is one of the action's mainsprings and no negligible source of comedy. Horace McNally, as Rory McSwiggin, is progressively impressive and the remainder of the support wholly commendable.

"The Wookey," although given a remarkably smooth premiere performance, stands in need of a few tightening adjustments. The play does not really begin until the slightly tardy entrance of Horace Wookey and there are other periods that need to be accelerated by judicious pruning.

That these are minor considerations was proved last night by the 10 curtain calls enthusiastically accorded the National"s first play of the season by a large and fascinated audience.

Canada Discovered!

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 25.—On the first lap of my trip, getting away from Hollywood, I visited all the way to San Francisco with an actors' agent. Sun on snow-covered Mount Shasta glistened like Merle Oberon's diamond necklace. Heat was frightful—we flew low and my ears snapped like an electric storm.

At each airport there were piles of lumber and working crews making acres of cement runways . . . Victoria hasn't changed a lick, and there's no sign of war anywhere, except soldiers on the boat. Even the hanging baskets from lamp posts are just the same. Churchill's picture is everywhere in neon lights.

In Vancouver they have pictures of Roosevelt and Churchill, with the caption "Our Standard Bearers.". Trip from Victoria to Vancouver was heavenly. There's nothing like sun, sea and sky to refresh your soul. City is perfectly protected by guns, antiaircraft, etc. I find the people here more English than in England. Sports of all kinds are played in the park. Their motto is "Keep people healthy and you'll keep them happy."

Eight gals from the Copacabana Club are being brought in to teach them the wiggles and shakes.

Meller's 'Nice' Folk Are Fun!

By Richard L. Coe

As if to prove that simple people can be more amusing than devils at least once in a while, the Roadsiders have revived Scott Marble's "Tennessee's Pardner" for its next-to-closing offering of the season. Most mellers that crop up on the Rockville Pike are more beguiling in their moments of dire doing; this refreshing revival is at its most charming when the pure in heart are unburdening their questioning spirits.

For Tennessee Kent is a wholesome gal, Caleb Swan is "legitimate and high-toned," and last evening's friendly first-nighters gave them the vocative respect usually reserved for the blackhearted and unrepentent. It isn't that there isn't villainy in Marble's old play, but not being of empire-shattering variety it pales simply into a cause for as highminded decency as ever evoked the cheers of the Red barn cognoscenti.

As the two angels whose behavior is so touching, Lansing Hall and Richard Walsh are superbly in the Roadside tradition. Miss Hall doesn't overdo the simplicity one whit as the pure but resourceful orphan from Smoky Mountain. Walsh is immensely effective as the card player of high morals; both of their readings are finely timed, with accents that don't vary from Act I to Act IV. They set the tone of a meller that's as diverting as it is different.

Director Ralph Fowler has stressed the quiet humors of "Tennessee's Pardner" with gentle detail. There's the constant lurking of villainy in the person of Edward Stevlingson, darting here and there with his dark treachery. There's the unabashed renunciation of evil by Nathalie Sherman to bring peace to our struggling friends. There's the man-and-wife bickerings of George Farrington and Lois Alexander to bring the once omnipresent rolling-pin back into stage play.

Maccubbin Waters shaves his habitual stage whiskers to play a young man—also of simple nature. Keith Adamson and Austin Brannen complete the cast.

Henry C. Pearson's setting for the Sudden Stop Hotel in Sand Hill, having the advantage of a full stage, is one of his happiest inventions of the summer. Which is exactly what "Tennessee's Pardner" is—a nice, happy play that makes virtue seem a bit more fun than vice. And as the Bishop said to the deacon, that's Something!

Girl Cyclist Chases 4 Robbers in Vain

Her Cries for Help Bring Only Laughs; Fugitives Make Get Away in Taxicab

No one paid the slightest attention to a call for assistance by a pretty War Department stenographer as she cycled up Constitution Avenue Sunday night in hot pursuit of four bandits. As a result, four thugs who had slugged and robbed a Washington visitor near the Reflecting Pool made their escape.

Virginia Riss, 20, of 1900 F Street Northwest, was greeted only by laughter and doubtful looks by a group of soldiers and citizens whom she passed while trailing the bandits.

"They just laughed at me when I told them the fleeing bandits had just beaten and robbed a man," Miss Riss recounted.

VIRGINIA RISS,

Miss Riss told Park Police that she and her roommate, Lucille Kieth, 20, and a married couple, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Thompson, 1660 Lanier Place Northwest, were bicycling near the pool when they all heard a man's moaning and saw four men running away from the vicinity.

All but Miss Riss left their bikes and ran to the assistance of the stricken man. She took off in pursuit of the men.

She chased after the bandits to Seventeenth Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest, where they got into a taxi.

Miss Riss got within 30 feet of the cab and shouted to the taxicab driver that he was hauling four robbers. He did not hear her. However, she did give Park Police the license number of the taxicab. The driver was brought in yesterday morning and questioned for clews.

Robert C. Page, 48, of Charlotte, N. C., the victim thanked the girl for her efforts. He said he was walking along the path near the pool when he came upon the men. They made way for him to pass and then attacked him from the rear. They took his wrist watch and a wallet containing $65. He was treated by a private physician for a bruised face and eye.

2 Die, 20 Hurt As Rain, Wind Lash Nation

By the Associated Press

Flood water and high winds caused at least two deaths and much property damage yesterday in the East, while rain fell in showers or thunderstorms over most of the Nation.

George Hemple, about 35, a milkman, was killed in Swedesboro, N. J., during a windstorm when five smokestacks of a canning plant tumbled down as he was passing by in a truck.

David Pinder, 48, was electrocuted in Jersey City, while seeking to repair an electric crane.

Twenty persons were injured as a storm swept through sections of Pennsylvania, Delaware and New Jersey. Streams of water two feet deep poured through some streets in Philadelphia.

Lansdowne, (Pennsylvania), residents reported the worst flood conditions in years, and the wind struck terrific blows in Swedesboro and Woodbridge, N. J., and in Wilmington, Del. Twenty houses were smashed in Woodbridge and more than 15 persons were injured.

Eleven airplanes were smashed at the Du Pont Airport in Wilmington and only three appeared worth repairing, airport officials said.

Electric service and communications were disrupted in many areas of Delaware and New Jersey.

Unfavorable weather compelled the American Clipper from Lisbon, due at LaGuardia Field in New York City, to turn back to Bermuda 900 miles out from the island.

The heaviest rain of the year (1.7 inches in 7 hours) flooded Charleston, W. Va., streets and some basements in business and residential districts but caused no serious damage. General rain but no damage was reported in West Virginia and Maryland.

At Chicago, the Weather Bureau declared downpours had soaked virtually all parts of the country except Kansas, Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado, Arizona and Nevada.

New York City was buffeted by gusts ranging up to 46 miles an hour in velocity and heavy bursts of rain.

Elwood Plant Ready To Turn Out Bombs

Elwood, Ill., Aug. 25 (AP).—Production of aerial bombs at the Army's 30 million shell-loading plant here was scheduled to start this week—more than two months ahead of schedule.

The bombs will roll off a mile-long assembly line, similar to that placed in operation July 12 for production of artillery shells. Supervising Officer Lieut. Col T. S. Gerber says the 23 square miles of buildings and magazines comprise "the largest shell loading plant now operating in the United States, and possibly in the world."

Whoa There!
What's a "nice size" orange?
No, we didn't think up the term "nice size" oranges. We saw it in a grocer's ad in the paper.
Maybe one of us thinks a big juicy orange is nice size. But maybe the store man means something else again. Why not price oranges by the pound, like apples—then you could get an idea about values from reading the grocery ads.
And since juice is heavy and pulp and skin light, you wouldn't pay a big price for bigger oranges with thick skins and much pulp.

Lowered Exemptions

The Senate Finance Committee has been searching for new sources of revenue to make good the amount lost when the House rejected mandatory joint returns for husbands and wives. The lowering of income tax exemptions to $1500 for married people and to $750 for single persons, for which the committee has voted, would yield just about the sum needed. What is even more important, the lower exemptions would compel seven million people to file income tax declarations for the first time. That is all to the good, for less than 15 million individuals filed income tax returns this year, and only a little over half that number were taxable. So the reduced exemptions would still leave the vast majority of wage earners untouched or else subject only to negligible contributions to the Treasury. Nevertheless, the Finance Committee showed sound judgment in deciding to postpone consideration of such controversial proposals as a general sales tax or pay roll taxes collected at the source. As the search for new tax revenue continues, Congress will undoubtedly have to employ some such means of tapping the incomes of the great majority of the people. But any attempt at radical revision of the House tax bill at this juncture would probably be futile, and might seriously delay passage of any tax legislation.

Cash In Hand

The Federal Reserve Board is trying to find out why the volume of money in circulation has reached a new peak of over $9,800,000,000. That figure is approximately two billion dollars above the total in circulation at the end of June, 1940, and $5,100,000,000 above the level of June, 1929. Some months ago the Federal Reserve Board noted that an extraordinarily large number of bills in denominations of $50 and over are "in circulation." It expressed the opinion that many of these notes were being hoarded by foreigners to avoid confiscation by their own governments or "freezing" by the United States. Current talk about drafting savings for the defense program is also believed to be responsible for a certain amount of hoarding.

Hoarded money, of course, has no immediate effect on prices, although fanatic hoarders would help to bid prices up if the fear of inflation should suddenly induce them to spend their cash. But leaving out of account all hoarded funds—the sum of which is a matter of guesswork—the amount of cash in circulation is unquestionably far above levels that would once have been considered normal. Other reasons for this bulge in the volume of money since the outbreak of war and the launching of the defense program are fairly obvious. Employment totals are today at record height, and factory pay rolls are 53 per cent above the level of a year ago, according to the Federal Reserve Board. The Department of Commerce estimates that about $5,500,000,000 more in wages and salaries was paid out during the first half of this year than during the same period of 1940. And cash income from farm marketings was up about $500,000,000.

Not only is the national income rising rapidly in terms of money, but the increase is going chiefly to people who have limited checking accounts or none at all. It costs more to maintain a checking account than it did in the twenties. Moreover, some banking connections lost during the years when bank failures were epidemic have probably not been renewed. So the demand of many families for cash is likely to be greater.

As the preponderant volume of business is transacted by the use of checks, the rise in cash circulation carries a very mild inflationary threat compared with that presented by the banks' excess reserves which constitute a basis for a tremendous potential inflation of credit. In fact, if money in circulation controlled the rise and fall of prices, we should already have arrived at an advanced stage of inflation. As it is, only a careful analysis of the underlying reasons why more money is being used can determine how far this development is a visible symbol of inflation already under way, and how far it is a result of political disorders that lead to the hoarding of cash.

Advance Into Iran

The war which began as a conflict limited to four powers—Germany, Poland, Great Britain and France—has drawn into its vortex many nations that wanted only to be left alone in the ways of peace. That was true of Denmark, Norway and Finland, of the Low Countries, Greece and Yugoslavia, of Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria. Nine weeks ago the tides of war swept over Russia, a country which, only two years ago, believed it had bought peace by making a deal with Hitler. Events have proved how foolish was the belief that peace could be bought on such terms. And now, with the Russo-British invasion of Iran, it is Iran's turn to be made aware of the grim reality that in this struggle of world dimensions remoteness is no safeguard, neutrality no shield.

As a matter of fact, no nation, great or small, can remain aloof from and unaffected by the world conflict. Certainly not Iran. For since the German attack on Russia, her position has become one of vital importance to all the major combatants. A glance at the map shows why. Wedged in between Iraq, Turkey, Russia, Afghanistan, Baluchistan and India, Iran is at the crossroads of empire. In hostile hands it would constitute a grave menace to India, would cut off Russia from access to the Persian Gulf—which may soon be the only feasible route for the flow of supplies from Great Britain and the United States to the Soviet Union—and would separate the British from oil supplies indispensable to their navy. It would have been as suicidal for Russia and Great Britain to permit Iran to fall into the hands of the Axis as it would have been for Great Britain and the United States to permit a German occupation of Iceland.

Until Monday the struggle over Iran's fate went on under cover. The German armies are still a long way from Tabriz and Teheran. Before they can reach Iran they must first conquer the eastern Ukraine and the Caucasus or, alternatively, force or secure a passage for their troops across Turkey. Yet those possibilities neither London nor Moscow could ignore. Moreover, the Allies had to consider the equally dangerous possibility that the government at Teheran—perhaps by a coup d'etat similar to that which took place at Bagdad earlier this year, or in response to other forms of pressure by the Nazis—would be taken over by pro-Axis elements. The presence in Iran of dissident elements strengthened this fear. A large but undetermined number of German "tourists," Arab agitators, including Rashid Ali al-Gailani of Iraq, the Grand Mufti of Jerusalem and others were all ready to make trouble. Neither the British nor the Russians could safely brook a development the consequences of which would have been so dangerous.

However, both Russia and Great Britain first sought peaceful measures to remove the threat in Iran. They put pressure on Iran to expel the German "tourists" in her midst, but the Teheran government refused to comply in the manner suggested. Its actions may have been the result of German pressure, but whether that was the case or not, neither the Russians nor the British could afford to await the outcome of a slow process of persuasion—not with the Germans pressing on in Russia and the Nazi elements in Iran in a position to commit acts of sabotage against oil wells and other vital establishments in that country. That is why Russia and Great Britain have now moved in on Iran. They could not afford to permit Hitler to take the initiative this time, as Great Britain allowed him to do in the case of Norway, the Low Countries and Greece.

Job Aid

When the War Department last week announced that some 200,000 selectees and National Guardsmen would be released from service before Christmas, it was apparent that a carefully integrated reemployment program would be needed at once to help the men find jobs in private industry. This the department realized, of course. And local draft boards have now been instructed by the Selective Service director, Gen. Hershey, to act as liaison agents between returning soldiers and employers. Each board is to appoint a reemployment committeeman who will get in touch with employers before their former employes are released. If for any reason jobs are not available, committeemen will turn over the records of the returning men to State employment offices. If the State employment offices themselves cannot find jobs, then committemen must try to place the men with the aid of chambers of commerce, boards of trade, and various other national and local bodies.

The task is a considerable one. It demands as a matter of routine, patience and the wholehearted cooperation of all concerned. For in the natural course of events some of the men will be prevented by circumstance from picking up where they left off. This may work unwarranted hardship and, though not always avoidable, must be anticipated in working out the details of reemployment. With the best will in the world some employers, for a variety of reasons, may not be able to observe the provision of the Selective Service Act requiring the restoration of men to positions of "like seniority, status and pay." On the other hand, men who have had special technical training during their year in the Army will be worth considerably more to some employers now than a year ago, and their wage scale should rise accordingly. In fact, one of the most constructive tasks before committeemen and employers will be the intelligent allocation of men to defense jobs in which they can be of most use.

Much has been made of the moral obligation to reemploy returning soldiers, and enough stress cannot be put upon this obligation. Not only their morale, but that of the men still waiting for release from the Army will suffer, if the reemployment process proves slow or otherwise unsatisfactory. But, with many industries having exhausted the supply of skilled workers, the practical obligation to attend to this problem is equally great. For the quicker industry utilizes the labor supply released from the Army, the greater our chance, assuming availability of materials, of war production on a scale that will—and indeed must—outstrip past achievements.

Attorney General

On June 12 Robert H. Jackson was promoted from the Attorney Generalship to the Supreme Court. Now the vacancy created by his elevation has been filled—two and a half months later. It is a pity that the naming of a new Attorney General was held up so long. Particularly in these days of emergency government the President needs to have at his elbow a Cabinet officer vested with the substantive authority to advise on the constitutionality or otherwise of the President's actions. Moreover, the continuance of a vacancy at the head of this Government department was not conducive to departmental morale. If tongues have been wagging outside the department over the President's choice as Mr. Jackson's successor, what must have been the conversational hubbub inside? Now that the President has made up his mind, however, the department will be able to give its whole time again to its highly important work. Not only is all speculation stilled; the man who has been nominated for the succession, Francis Biddle, is familiar in the department as Solicitor General, and is, therefore, versed in its mechanics. More importantly, he is a chief whose legal attainments will rank with those of most of his predecessors. The President has made an excellent choice.

Back To Wheels

Next to death war—whether or not you are in it—is the great leveler. From the occupied countries, you may recall, have come many a photograph and newsreel shot of dignified burghers pedaling about their business on bicycles. For, with most automobiles commandeered, "wheels," as they used to be called, have become the only means of locomotion. We never thought much about this till yesterday, when half-a-dozen bicyclists, no less, nearly mowed us down. Evidently the bicycle is coming back into its own here as well as in Europe. Bicycle dealers explain the reason as a direct result of the gas restriction program. Some people with ideas of their own have foresightedly invested in wheels, so that if and when there is no more gas at all, they will be sure of getting to and from their work. Some, of course, like to bicycle for fun or for exercise. But it's much more satisfying to think of the bicycle revival as evidence of good old American resourcefulness in an emergency. Looked at that way, the talk of apathy toward the defense effort seems nothing short of base slander. Who says the public isn't willing to make voluntary sacrifices?

TIME LINGERS

The rainbow fades,
The dream is done,
Friends leave us
And our grief is vain,
While Time,
A mountain in the sun,
Heeds not the snowflake,
Wind or rain.

Beauty and dreams,
Like golden weather,
Will come again,
But not that one
Who sleeps
Where the willow's
Emerald feather
Brushes the marble
Moon or sun.

Trouble Ahead

In spite of public opinion expressed through the Gallup Poll that labor strife is the principal hold up in arms production, facts indicate that poor management, lack of foresight and selfishness on the part of the owners of the means of production have had a great deal of influence in retarding National Defense. Actual instances, too numerous to mention, all over the country will bear this out.

First I would like to point out the refusal of the OPM to recognize the United Automobile Workers plan of using now idle plants and machinery adaptable for defense production instead of building new plants and new machinery at additional expense of money and valuable time. Over-expansion of industries, a large contributing factor of the last post war depression could have thus been lessened and the production of planes and munitions begun immediately. No mention has been made of the use of the Pierce, the Hupp or the Graham plants for these purposes, as was proposed.

Small plants, built to produce electrical supplies and metal goods of all sorts have not been used as the clamor for more of these goods is raised. They are standing by idle, throwing thousands of men out of work as they find it impossible to get the raw material with which to work. At the same time the larger corporations are increasing their plants at Government expense and there is production only on paper and a large number of skilled men out of work.

Production cannot increase until the public has been told the truth about the delay; until headlines cease saying that so many millions of defense dollars are tied up in strikes with so little attention being paid to the issues involved. Public opinion is wearing itself out on an ever-decreasing issue.

WORKER.

Juggernaut

The word "juggernaut" is being used often in newspapers to indicate the German advancing troops. I presume that most readers do not know the meaning and pronunciation of this word. The Sanskrit word is correctly transcribed into English as jagad-nath or Jagannath, meaning Worldlord or Worldprotector. This is one of the many names for the well known Hindu god Vishnu. In order to facilitate the pronunciation of the word by English speaking people, unable to pronounce the vowels "a" and "aa," the spelling "juggernaut" was adopted. This most renowned shrine of the god Vishnu is placed in a celebrated temple in Puri, Orissa (Hindustan) which was completed in the twelfth century B. C. The idol is a carved block of wood with a hideous face, blood-red mouth and with eyes made of precious stones. On holydays the throne of Jagannath was placed on a high tower which moved on wheels. The people pulled it along with ropes. In order to show their ardent devotion pious Hindus threw themselves under this colossal car to be crushed under its wheels. It is entirely out of order to compare this huge car with tanks crushing enemy forces, its purpose was not to kill but to show Vishnu with his brother Bala Rama and his sister Subhadra to his devotees, who intentionally sacrificed themselves to be admitted to Vishnu's heaven. In the first instance the tanks are instruments of battle, in the second the car is a vehicle being used in a liturgical act. When Mr. Murphy writes in the Washington Post of August 20 about "A military juggernaut of matchless power and skill," he is probably not aware of the fact that he is offending the peaceful character of a god, worshiped in far off India.

Too Soft?

In reading your articles on daylight saving, it occurs to me that if our country means to whip Hitler, we had better not shudder at the idea of arising one hour earlier each day! It would be better to make it three—so as to beat Hitler by one! All summer in France we rose by German time, two hours earlier than standard. Moreover, we liked it! All a matter of habit, but if we want to win this war we must be about it, and cast off slothfulness.

Over there in France they smile pityingly at us. We are "too late" already, they feel. We have rank politicians as France had. We are divided as France was. We are moving toward disaster as France did. We are indeed sister-nations in our love of individual freedom. Very well. Look at France! Is she free now? Does she love freedom? Yes! And forever! Frenchmen say, "Every Frenchman is to blame for France's defeat. Every man should beat his chest, and say, 'I did not work hard enough. I am to blame.' No need to blame the defeat on others." Now has come the punishment.

So what of us—Americans holding up our defense of our own freedom with strikes, with selfishness, with laissez-faire! Believe me, verily we shall have our reward, for patriotic words will not save us! As a Frenchman told me, "One thing we still have—our eloquence!" Well, we may still keep our eloquence—may it comfort us.

Were we in time to aid a single one of the democracies that fell before we could say "Jack Robinson?" (England excepted) No! Our workers must strike when their fellow workers in other countries need them most. By so doing, they risk losing all their liberty. What of it! They must tie everything up to gain their ends, come what may. One feels like a Cassandra! Oh, if only our wealthy nation, fairly bursting with abundance of food, of everything, could experience one week of life in unoccupied France, our people would work. They would work like blazes—they would demand the end of strikes, they would demand daylight saving time. Are we so soft, so dumb, so heedless of what is happening to our world, that we complacently sit in our easy chairs waiting to be blown out of them and to be left naked and starving, the laughing stock of the enemy?

It Worked Once

Why all this hubbub about locating the War Department Buildings here in Washington? During the World War in 1917-19, we cut down all the trees and located a line of three-story stucco buildings on the Mall, from the Capitol to the Museum and beyond.

A line of three-story wooden-stucco buildings, yes, two lines, could be erected from the Capitol to Washington Monument, that would house anywhere from 50,000 to 100,000 persons, without any delay, and convenient to the center of Washington and all of the other Government offices, and White House and the other departmental buildings. It worked once, why shouldn't it work again, with speed and efficiency?

"Fast Time"

There is plainly a misunderstanding in this city as to the meaning of daylight saving, judging by the comments quoted in this morning's Post. These must come from those who have not lived under "fast time," and are unacquainted with its advantages. Some do not understand that after the clock is set ahead one hour, life would go on as usual.

I understand that daylight saving is intended to prevail only during summer time, that is, from about May to the middle of September. If that is true, here are some of the benefits as I observed them while on a visit in New York State during July. I was spared one hour of fitful sleep in the early morning because of broad daylight, when it was too warm to draw the shades down. This was balanced by going to bed an hour earlier at night, by clock time, not sun time. There was time after dinner for many recreational activities before dark. I also saw a man busily working at the construction of a summer camp at 9 o'clock in the evening, which would have been impossible under regular time. Others mowed their lawns.

For those in Washington engaged in defense activities and working until 5 or 6 o'clock in the afternoon, there is little time after dinner for recreation of any kind out-of-doors. Even at this date, if daylight saving time were in effect, it would be daylight until about 8 o'clock, with manifest advantages for out-door recreation purposes.

In addition to the arguments in favor of daylight saving I have already set forth, it is obvious that an hour's electricity would be saved in nearly every home during the summer. This of course would not be true in winter.

Aiding Russia

In October of 1939 I received a letter from a small country town in Worcestershire—the heart of England. My friend wrote at this time: "This war is the very devil—nothing much happening, but civilian life is upset all 'round. Lots of us have put our cars up, and food rationing comes in shortly—anyhow home life has come into its own and we shall all be able to catch up with our reading and various other studies. I am already toying with the idea of learning French (by post) so that I can follow the foreign broadcasts . . . Whatever else you hear be sure that no one wants war over here, but we feel absolutely fed up with living on the edge of a volcano these last years and want to make a stand now for a lasting peace . . . I hope these letters get through all right without any trouble. It seems a pity if we are to lose contact with our American friends now."

Conditions are worse in England since 1939—men and women of Britain and the continent have been sacrificing their lives that democracy might survive in the face of Fascist aggression. However suspicious we might be of certain English misleaders—we know that the spirit of the English people is unbroken—we know that they are fighting in a common cause with the other democratic peoples of the world and need our support.

This is no time to quibble about the pros and cons of aiding Soviet Russia. The Russians are fighting a common enemy and those who wish to aid England without helping the Soviet Union at the same time are playing into the hands of the Axis. Whether we are invaded or not is beside the point—a Nazi dominated Europe would stifle American foreign trade to the extent that we would be starved into submission, and like Finland and Norway, forced to become a vassal of the Third Reich. Our independence depends upon the fate of England and the Soviet Union, and not upon the lies of isolationists like Lindbergh and Wheeler.

Vera Cruz Train

I looked at my watch. 10:30. Forty-five minutes late, with the one-lung engine still giving no indications of pulling out. Passengers continued to arrive, leisurely, as though they had known all along the train would be there waiting for them. Mexicans are like that.

And we are in Vera Cruz. I keep reminding myself. I have to to keep from going crazy. It is the only way to live in a country that refuses to accept TIME. Pretend, as the Mexican does, that there is no past or future, but only the present.

The second class cars were packed. It was Sunday and the travelers—in spite of their sombreros and bandanas and loose dungarees—reminded you surprisingly of Atlantic City excursionists. There were the same tired faces that the ocean weekends used to bring. There were the same weary mothers, the same effervescent children. There were the same spoils of the city—green and yellow wicker bags, toy elephants, blankets, and scarfs with the nostalgic inscriptions, Ja Recuerdo Vera Cruz.

Every variety and sub-variety of Mexican was present—fishermen and cowboys, farmers and merchants, swarthy Indians from the jungle, brown ones from the mountains, peons with the desert still in their skins, and the beautiful Tehuantepec women of the west coast.

With them they brought the treasures of Vera Cruz and the north, putting them under the wooden seats, in the rafters, and in the aisle, wherever there was a breathing hole. There were sacks of grain beneath your feet and chickens tied in pairs. With them were stalks of bananas, and mangoes and oranges, and here and there a bird cage. Pineapples and hats and baskets they hung overhead with the dun-colored flasks. In the aisle a little white-marked pig squealed while a parrot screeched at him from a bench rest. There had been no more room an hour ago, and still they piled it up.

And with the new arrivals came an endless stream of salesmen, picking their way over the one-time aisle. They sold everything from silver and peanuts and leather to fruit juices and peppers.

One dark-skinned dealer, with the usual sombrero and with a red bandana about his neck, stopped beside us. He seemed less of a salesman than the others, more as if he were doing it for the fun of it. The dark eyes made me think suddenly of the sign at the end of the car:

BEWARE OF ROBBERS
A clever band of thieves is operating in Vera Cruz in the guise of salesmen, porters, etc.
Watch Your Baggage.

I looked up at our baggage. It was still there.

The robber-dealer took six pairs of hose from a paper sack and laid them on my uncle's knee. "Two pesos." He felt a pair to show the fineness of the silk. "Two pesos." Held up two fingers and waved them.

"Carramba," exclaimed my uncle, a born horse trader. "I am a poor man, not a tourist. I work for a living."—all this in Spanish.

The dark-skinned man shrugged his shoulders, and said in Spanish the equivalent of "For why am I in business—to give away money? I'm losing, but for a friend I'll make it one peso."

My uncle, still the horse trader, tossed out a Spanish word and turned his back on the socks. An Indian woman who had been listening leaned closer. She knew what would happen, and her two black teeth gleamed in anticipation.

"Quanto questo"—how much, asked the dealer, and he winked at me. His good humor was contagious, and I wanted to laugh out, but didn't. "Quantos? Quantos?" asked the dealer again.

"Fifty centavos." It was said masterfully, and the Indian woman across applauded with her eyes.

The dealer threw up his hands with all the fervor of an anguished soul in poverty, and with dignity stalked away—four seats away. The next second he was back again to complete the deal. While my uncle counted out the number of socks, the dealer pulled out a handful of women's stockings. He dangled them up and down like limp marionettes.

"Where did you get them," asked my uncle.

"Where do you think?" came the answer in Spanish. "Stole them."

The nonchalance with which he tossed off the information put him beyond the moral law. He looked as if he would have slit a throat with the same "what does it matter?" shrug of the shoulders. And yet the way his eyes laughed when he said it made you want to laugh too. He exuded life, and as he dangled those limp silk stockings before us, the joy of living bubbled all around us. But there was no more sale, and, eyes laughing still, he pushed his way through the crowd and was gone.

***

He had hardly time to leave the car when a shrill whistle from the engine shook the passengers into activity. The venders scrambled for the doors, and fruit drink salesmen began to clamor for their glasses. Everybody looked out the windows again, waving and shouting. Even the little girl buried in the Mexican Superman book raised her eyes and smiled down on the platform.

A jerk shook the whole car, and we were moving on our way to Suchiate—44 hours, 600 miles, and 150 stops away. My uncle reached for his watch on his lapel. He put it there because "it was safer."

"What time do you have?" he asked without thinking. Then he jumped up. "I was wearing that this morning. He took my watch!"

But it was a little late. Vera Cruz and sock salesmen with laughing black eyes and Ingersolls belonged to the past. But to remind him of it he had only to look at the placard at the end of he car—

Beware of Robbers.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Coming Showdown

LIPPMANN

THERE will have to be a showdown in this country and it will come in a few weeks, as soon as Congress has finished with its holiday. It will be a showdown to decide whether our political leaders are going to permit the American people to unite in defense of their vital interests or whether, in face of an alliance of hostile powers, our leaders are going to divide, distract, and demoralize the Nation by an internal political feud. The past few weeks have made it clear that the foreign policy of this country, the organization of its defenses, the morale of the Army, and the spirit of the people, have been deeply and dangerously shaken by the conduct of our political leaders.

This condition cannot be corrected by the patriotic, but unorganized mass of the people themselves. They must inevitably remain confused as long as the President and his lieutenants, the opposition leaders and their lieutenants, are unable to rise above the confusing deadlock which, politely but quite inaccurately, we call a great debate.

THERE will have to be a debate—a straightforward and conclusive debate to determine whether the foreign policy and the defense program of the United States is to have the support of the opposition leaders, or whether it is to be first stalled, then defeated, then abandoned, and finally reversed. Yet, before this unavoidable and indispensable showdown can be had, the President will have to rally the great majority of the people by clarifying and fortifying the national effort.

This he can do only if he will realize that the President has three great functions in times like these: He is Commander-in-Chief and must make the final decisions on the high strategy of the Nation's defense; he is the chosen leader of the Nation and must earn and must hold the confidence of the Nation; he is the Chief Executive and must pass finally on men and on measures to organize the Nation's defense.

NO one man can at one time do all these things effectively if he does not delegate to others whatever it is possible to delegate. It is impossible to delegate to others the determination of high strategy or the leadership of the Nation. But it is possible to delegate all but the very greatest questions of policy in the administration of the defense program. It is possible and it is necessary.

Therefore, in whatever form seems more suitable and without waiting till the perfect superman has descended miraculously from heaven, the President should centralize the defense program under a high-ranking war policies committee, with an executive official empowered to enforce its decisions upon all departments of the Administration.

THIS measure is indispensable to the actual progress of the defense program. It is necessary to revive and generate popular confidence in the program. It is the one and only way to free the President's time and energy so that he may concentrate his attention upon the duties of the Commander in Chief, for which he is preeminently qualified and gifted, and upon the task of national leadership, in which no one else can replace him.

As a matter of fact, his conduct as Commander in Chief has been so efficient, so discerning and yet so prudent, that few among his political opponents have ventured to challenge him on this ground. There have been some who wished him to move more boldly or more quickly at this point or that and there have been others who did not wish him to move at all.

But the great mass of the people have been so willing and so ready to believe in him that no one, not Mr. Hoover, nor even Mr. Wheeler, has ventured to risk an open full-fledged debate on any of the specific strategic decisions—Greenland, Iceland, the Red Sea, the South Atlantic ferry service, the Atlantic patrol, or the disposition of the Pacific Fleet. Their opposition has been centered not on what is actually being done but on what they in general imagine and allege is going to be done.

And here they have managed to confuse and frighten the people because the President, speaking too infrequently, too casually, and too abstractly to the people, has been neglecting his great task of popular leadership. He has consumed so much energy nursing the difficulties between OPM and OPACS that he has had altogether insufficient energy to lead the Nation.

If only the President will put his house in order by delegating the necessary authority over the defense program, and if he will go to the people, speaking directly and fully and continually until they understand what the defense of the Nation requires, then the position will be prepared for a showdown with the old guard Republican opposition and with the disaffected Democrats.

When that showdown comes, it will be in order to ask the opposition a number of searching and pertinent questions. Thus for example, it will be necessary to ask whether they are in fact in favor of arming the United States, and if they are, what effort they have ever made in these past three critical years to see that the United States had a great Navy, a large air force and an adequate Army. They go about saying that they favor national defense but when, for example, did Mr. Hoover or Mr. Wheeler advocate in advance any important defense measure, or use his influence to get one enacted? Have they not been either ominously silent, or openly opposed, while others, Republicans and Democrats alike, were struggling to plan, enact, and administer the defense program?

IT will then be in order to ask them whether, in opposing effective support of Britain and China, after failing to commit themselves to the arming of the United States, they will—if Britain and China fail—continue to give even nominal support to the arming of the United States. If, with the Axis and Japan held at bay by the heroic resistance of the British and the Chinese and the Russians, they give no positive support to the American defense program, what will they advise the country to do if they succeed in paralyzing its support of Britain, China and Russia, and if they compel it to stand alone against a victorious alliance of Germany and Japan.

Will they, if they manage to get America entirely isolated and encircled, advise us to continue arming for defense, or will they then advise us to reduce the appropriations, repeal conscription, demobilize and disarm? If, as they now profess, they favor an "impregnable defense," what will they do if the totalitarian victors demand that we disarm or prepare to fight? For, surely, they cannot be so infantile as to imagine that if Germany and Japan conquer all opposition in Europe and Asia, the victors will then sit quietly by and let the United States produce the greatest naval and aerial power on earth.

So when we come to the showdown with the opposition we shall need to know whether, when they have isolated the United States, they intend to disarm and surrender, or to arm and resist.

The Road To Peace

By William Allen White

That was a historic conference, probably one of the momentous gatherings of the thousand years since the Magna Carta, between the government of Great Britain and the head of the administration of the United States. It is curious how events in the last thousand years have gradually pointed to the evolution of freedom in Western Europe, in the South American countries and in the English-speaking world. Consider the Magna Carta, the Cromwellian rebellion, the Declaration of Independence, the fall of the Bastille in Paris, Napoleon's Waterloo, the revolts of South America under Simon Bolivar, the Gettysburg speech, the League of Nations and the conference of the powers on the sea yesterday.

Common men are vastly freer than the barons were who challenged King John. It has not been a straight line, this march of freedom. It has zigged and zagged and curved. It has bent up and away from and back to freedom, but always the line of liberty has moved on.

The twentieth century is drawing to an end. The new century is about to open the third thousand years since Golgotha. Man in this epoch has climbed a long upward way. But in every struggle, in this era man has been trying to free himself from toil and the fear of war. But he has gained much. He has stored up knowledge with invention of printing. He has harnessed steam, begun the use of electricity, invented the percussion engine. With each of the expressions of widening knowledge, man has broadened his liberty.

The allies of liberty are fighting this great war, this war of machines to free men from machines by breaking down high barriers which slow down machines and threaten men with idleness and starvation. To break down tariff walls will mark the next step in human evolution.

Today the conference in the Atlantic is in the stage of "what we shall do if we can do it when we are able to do it." It is written in the potential of the future. History is engraved finally only in the past indicative. But this great conference of the English-speaking powers promises freedom to lovers of freedom everywhere. It heralds the guarantee of nations to live as they will, under their own form of government and giving all—victors and vanquished alike—access to the world's raw materials.

This is a momentous occasion. This is proclamation of a new era in the development of civilization in the twentieth century and in a new millennium of the third thousand years of our epoch. A place in human progress will be marked somewhat by this conference of the powers.

Remember it and tell your children that you lived in this day and how you heard the news.

GRADUALLY, the foreign policy of the United States has developed. As the war went from phase to phase, it has become evident that the President is leading his country along the road to peace—the road to sure peace that follows international justice. A good neighbor cannot live safely and justly, even armed to the teeth, in a mean neighborhood. A decent nation cannot thrive even behind ships and guns and planes in a world of aggressors. Only as human relations are fair and equitable can decent men prosper happily. Only as international relations are founded upon international justice can democracy survive anywhere in the world. Justice itself is set up only after discussion and compromise—never by arbitrary force under proclamation or by ukase!

STEP by step, for four years, beginning with his demand that the aggressors be quarantined, back in 1937, President Roosevelt has hewn his pathway to that conference in the Atlantic. In the light of that conference, his policies are clearly revealed. Look at the pathway: the repeal of the Embargo Act, the shipment of arms to Britain after Dunkirk, the swap of destroyers for island bases to protect our continent and to enforce the Monroe Doctrine, the lease-lend bill, the defense program, the occupation of Newfoundland, the establishment of naval bases in Iceland—all these, taken a step at a time, mark the straight course to permanent peace.

The President's peace aims were announced Thursday from the conference in the Atlantic. Any deviation in the past two years of war from the course he has kept would have led us quickly into war. For any other policy than his would have let Great Britain go down in defeat. It would have left us facing the totalitarian tyrants alone.

PRESIDENT Roosevelt has remained silent with simple courage while he has walked his steadfast way to peace. His enemies, the isolationists, have abused him by clamoring with incessant indecency he was leading America to war. He has let events speak for themselves. Now his deeds, ringing down the corridor of the years, are clarion notes. Now the country knows that the President has been walking the only way to peace which America can follow. Ours is the way of peace through justice, offering liberty as the basis of peace, holding up freedom to all rulers and to all people as the way of life in a modern world.

These lines are written by one who has opposed President Roosevelt in three campaigns and felt his election for a third term a public calamity. Yet today we ask all American citizens to look back over the course he has charted in the last four years. Aren't you proud of your President? Why should partisanship cloud the glory of this day?

THE TYRANTS were afraid to let their people read the eight peace points which President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill offered to the world as the war aims of the democracies. If the tyrants were sure of their ground, they would be sure of their people. The tyrants would be sure that their people would reject these aims or, if not reject them, doubt the sincerity of those who offered the new peace.

But fear is the tyrant's poison. He drinks it to his death. Some way, despite the censorship, despite all the barriers erected around continental Europe, the peoples there will learn the truth and the truth will make them free. When any man, any nation, any tyrant fears the truth, he is doomed.

The clinching proof that the tyrants are scared is found today in the boasting, taunting, arrogant reply of the Hitlerite to democracy's peace aims. Getting tough is a sign of rough going.

Philippine Defense

By Vicente Albano Pacis

MacArthur, A Military Missionary

Manila.

THE APPOINTMENT of Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur as commander in chief of America's land and air forces in the Far East has bolstered up the Orient's democratic morale, but it has also increased the expectation of war. As a consequence of the latter the belief is increasing that America's first contact with the Axis Powers in this war may take place in the Far East. And the demand is developing that America, instead of preparing her sector of the ABCD (America, Britain, China and Dutch or Holland) front merely for defense, should prepare it for offense.

In the Far East, Gen. MacArthur is much more than a military commander. He has been a military missionary in the truest sense of the word. Completing the longest term as Chief of Staff of the U. S. Army in 1935, he came to Manila as military adviser to the Commonwealth. This was before Japan invaded China and Hitler overran Poland. The native peoples of the Orient stood in dread fear of Japan, and the Western Powers were vacillating between defense and flight should Japan try to grab their colonies. Britain was in her appeasing mood; Holland was wishfully thinking, and the best opinion in Washington was that the Philippines would have to be abandoned if attacked by Japan. But at Manila, MacArthur began preaching a new doctrine of resistance and survival.

HE was telling the Filipinos that their insularity renders defense of their islands by themselves tenable, since a defended shoreline is ten times stronger than a sea-born invasion of numerically equal strength. This being the case, they could make victory for their enemy so costly that he would not care to attain the objective of conquest, much less take the risk. When, after the collapse of France, Germany swerved northward instead of crossing the channel to England, he was quick to point out as eloquent proof of his theory the Germans' inability to take insular England. Even when Germany reached Norway by sea, he pointed out that the conquest was incomplete and was the work of Fifth Columnists. When Crete fell, he explained that England still remained uninvaded and that Crete, after all, was not prepared for defense.

It was too late for China to absorb all these preachings, so she failed to defend her shores, but the Chinese had so imbibed his preaching on self-defense and survival that they have demonstrated a morale equaled only so far by the English people. But the peoples of Oceania—the natives of Java, of Borneo, of Australia, of New Zealand—heard every MacArthur military dictum. The Philippines became in fact his sounding board. And the British and the Dutch soon found their colonials' morale so elevated that they began to train them against the day when Japan would run amuck on behalf of her "Greater Asia Co-Prosperity Sphere." Indo-China proved the exception. Abandoned by France and torn between Petain and De Gaulle, it became Japan's convenient face-saver.

BUT now that America is consolidating her forces under MacArthur, there is logic in the suspicion that perhaps the showdown is near. Japan is in a dilemma, and in her predicament she may go berserk. She is afraid to support Germany because Russia may come out unscathed and thus be able to punish her. She cannot support Russia because Germany may eventually be in Vladivostok and in a position to castigate her. So, unless Indo-China will suffice to mask Nippon's blushing face for her failure in China and her fall from the Soviet and Nazi horses which she was trying to ride at the same time, she may in despair try to seek a turn in her fortune in the Dutch East Indies.

If this is the case, America is bound to clash with the Axis in the Far East even before she may have extended all-out aid short of land forces to England. England has enough soldiers and America cannot hope to land an expeditionary force on the European continent at the present time. Only by sea and air can she contact Hitler's forces. But in the Orient, if Japan gives cause, the American Navy may begin shooting in the Pacific, and American bombers may begin blasting Tokyo.

Consequently, public opinion in the Philippines—and perhaps in the entire democratic sector in the East—is beginning to demand that Uncle Sam be ready in the Philippines not only for defense, but more importantly for offense. A leading Manila editorial this week reflects this new thought:

"ONE of the inescapable lessons of the present war," it states in part, "is that the country that has prepared only for defense and has consequently fought only defensive battles, has invariably lost. Poland, France, Belgium, the Low Countries, and Scandinavia waited for Germany to attack—and they have all lost . . . These considerations point to the wisdom of American preparedness, especially in the Philippines, capable of beating the enemy to the punch . . .

"To defend the Philippines and deny enemy access to his sector of democracy's Far Eastern front, Lieut.-Gen. MacArthur will not need more than 500,000 men . . . What he lacks are arms for these men, effective naval support, and an air force that will be able . . . to carry the conflict to the very nerve center of the enemy.

"MOVE a battleship with escorting cruisers and destroyers from Hawaii to the Western Pacific and send 1,000 bombers, including a few flying fortresses together with complementary fighters, to Manila, and either the enemy will not dare start anything or Uncle Sam will be on his neck the moment he starts seeking a fight . . .

"America has no ambition in the Far East that calls for an aggressive policy or an offensive war . . . But the Machine Age has made defense synonymous with defeat and offense with victory. To be able to defend themselves, the democracies, including America, must be prepared to stalemate intended aggressions by the awesomeness of their preparations or take the offensive when sufficiently provoked."

Britain's Move On Iran

Foreign Office Text

By the Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 25.—During the past month the British government has repeatedly warned the Iranian government of potential dangers arising from the presence in Iran of an excessively large German colony.

Germans resident in Iran, as in other countries, have long been subjected to the organized discipline of the German Nazi Party.

As in other neutral countries, German authorities have endeavored to pursue in Iran a policy of infiltration by sending their agents to mingle with and to replace the resident German community.

The attention of the Iranian government has, therefore, frequently been called to the desirability in the interests of Iran herself of taking effective steps to check this process of infiltration.

It has been pointed out that the presence of a large number of German technical experts and agents in various parts of Iran, employed in factories and public works as well as on roads and railways and in many other important posts, cannot fail to constitute a serious danger to the maintenance of Iranian neutrality.

THE FACT that the Germans occupy in Iran so many key positions in industry and communications gives them unique facilities for doing so.

It has also been made clear to the Iranian government that the British government regards this as matter of grave concern to themselves.

Underground measures taken by the German government to spread German influence in Iran and to establish eventually German control and domination in that country obviously constitute serious danger for the Iranian government themselves, as well as British interests in Iran; but they are also a danger to neighboring countries.

India clearly cannot disinterest herself from such developments in adjacent territory.

Iraq also is closely concerned, especially since the Germans in Iran are known to have played a part in the revolt last April against the legal government at Bagdad and in subsequent events when the rebels were induced to take up arms against Iraq's British allies. Soviet Russia also when she was attacked by Germany took a serious view of the threat to Russian interests caused by German activities in Iran.

TOWARD the middle of July the British government, realizing that representations made at Teheran for many months past had remained without effect, instructed the British Minister again to impress upon the Iranian government as a matter of utmost urgency the need for taking immediate action.

The German invasion of Soviet Russia, by extending the zone of hostilities to include one of the countries adjacent to Iran, had obviously greatly increased the necessity for an early settlement of this problem.

Sir R. Bullard was accordingly instructed to press for a drastic reduction in the number of Germans who were permitted to remain in the country.

Parallel action was taken by the Soviet Ambassador at Teheran on instructions from his government.

In their reply to this strong recommendation Iranian authorities appeared to recognize in principle the wisdom of the advice offered them by His Majesty's government and the Soviet government. They indicated they were taking some steps to reduce the number of Germans in Iran and admitted the obligation incumbent upon them to keep under strict control the activities of those Germans who remained.

No doubt, however, because they were reluctant to offend the German government even in defense of their own vital interests, the proportion of Germans whom Iranian authorities actually removed from the country was very small and on August 16 Sir R. Bullard and the Soviet Ambassador accordingly repeated to the Iranian government in the most formal and emphatic manner the view of their two governments that the German community in Iran should be required to leave the country without further delay.

The Iranian government was told by His Majesty's government and the Soviet government that they had no designs against Iran's political independence or territorial integrity and that it was their sincere desire to maintain a policy of friendship and cooperation with Iran.

THIS communication contained a proposal devised in order to meet Iran's special needs by which a few German technicians engaged on specially important work might be retained temporarily; and His Majesty's government and the Soviet government offered to assist the Iranian government by endeavoring to find suitably qualified experts to replace departing German technicians, and also stated that they gladly would concert with the Iranian government on measures to alleviate any temporary hardships which might be caused by the simultaneous departure of large numbers of trained personnel.

The Iranian government's reply to the communications addressed to them on August 16 shows that they are not prepared to give adequate satisfaction to the recommendations of the British government and the Soviet government in this important matter.

It is now clear that further friendly representations to the Iranian government on the same lines as hitherto would serve no useful purpose and that His Majesty's government and the Soviet government must have recourse to other measures to safeguard their essential interests.

These measures will in no way be directed against the Iranian people; His Majesty's government have no designs against the independence and territorial integrity of Iran and any measures they may take will be directed solely against attempts of Axis powers to establish their control of Iran.

The Roosevelt Family Income

MRS. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT has written an article for the September number of the Ladies Home Journal in which she discusses the Roosevelt family income. The press agent of the magazine has sent me advance information on the chance that I might mention the matter and thus stimulate sales, which is the proper job of a press agent. I am glad to have this copy for the topic has been one of my favorites ever since the President authorized publication of the confidential income tax returns of various individuals who had opposed him but refused to reveal his own. About that time a Congressional inquiry was running in the House and two opposition Congressmen, Treadway, of Massachusetts, and Ham Fish, the Republican who somehow always reelects himself in Roosevelt's home district, were allowed to ask questions only with the understanding that they would refrain from pressing any demand for publication of the President's own return, of his mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, or Jimmy. Not a single return of any member of the Roosevelt family has been made public officially in all the years that the family with the exception of the two youngest boys, Frankie and Johnny, has been riding the gravy train, although the returns of many other men have been analyzed critically and in a tone of voice which implied that a citizen was to be pilloried for strict compliance with the law and ought to have paid more taxes than the law required.

PEGLER

In her article Mrs. Roosevelt says that Mr. Roosevelt during his years in the Presidency has spent more than his salary fulfilling the obligations of his office and that she, herself, notwithstanding an increase in her income, has less principal now than she had in 1932.

THIS may be so, but I still have to wonder why the President is so bashful about the family's several income tax returns in view of the fact that he, personally, gave the orders which broke the seal of confidence which normally is supposed to protect the returns of other citizens. Why the special privilege? And, inasmuch as Mrs. Roosevelt's own vast income is derived from the Presidential office in the amount by which it exceeds her average income of the years before 1932 and inasmuch as Mrs. Roosevelt plainly recognizes this excess to be a public trust, I insist that the public has a right to know what she does with the money. I have reason to believe that a portion of it has been given to the Communistic causes.

Of course, there is a question which precedes this one. That question is whether Mrs. Roosevelt has exploited the Presidency to make money. John Garner when he was Vice President turned down an opportunity as a radio commentator with the remark that the price was more than he was worth as a private citizen but not enough to hire the Vice President. A comparison of Mrs. Roosevelt's earnings before 1932 and since would prove that the Presidential office has been exploited, and after that fact has been established we come to the question of what she did with the money.

JIMMY ROOSEVELT is the only one whose returns have been made public but he did that informally and even so admitted flatly that while he was still a law student he accepted a job as window dressing for a group of promoters at $15,000 a year, knowing "perfectly well that they were paying for the name and for any value the name might have." Yet when Congressman Treadway tried to compel an expert analysis of Jimmy's return similar to the hostile inspection of the returns of the President's political opponents, he was blocked by members who were determined that the Roosevelt family should have this special privilege.

This subject has been allowed to lie quiet for a long time, but inasmuch as Mrs. Roosevelt has seen fit to revive it there is just one answer: that is to be found in the income tax returns and nowhere else, and the President has the same authority to break the seal of confidence on Mrs. Roosevelt's return, on his mother's return, on all Roosevelt's—Jimmy's, Elliott's and Mrs. John Boettiger's and on the return of the late Uncle Forbes Morgan who landed a job with the whisky trust at $100,000 a year shortly before he died.

Break out the returns and then we will be in a position to discuss the issue with Mrs. Roosevelt on even terms.

Square Dance 'Callers' Have Big Following

Northampton, Mass. (AP).—Square dances are more popular than ever in Pioneer Valley in western Massachusetts. At least 1500 people follow their favorite "callers" to the town or grange halls. The callers have achieved a local popularity that compares with the fame of the big time orchestra leaders in the cities. Farmers, railroad workers truck drivers and chauffeurs by day, the Pioneer Valley callers usually handle three or four dances a week.

Lame Pig

Greensboro, N. C. (AP).—Guilford County police, finding a quantity of illegal whisky and a number of paper cups in an automobile, charged the owner with operating a "portable speakeasy." "It looked like he was peddling liquor up and down the streets," Deputy Sheriff W. L. Wheeless said.

'Long Distance' Gives Burglary Tip

Omaha (AP).—A telephone operator in Chicago, nearly 500 miles away, was credited with tipping off Omaha police to an attempted burglary at the Omaha Field Club, about three miles from downtown police headquarters here. The operator placed a long-distance call for a Chicago man at the club. Shortly before the phone rang, Field Club Watchman J. E. Patterson spotted intruders.

"Prowlers have just broken into the clubhouse," he told the operator. "Please call police."

She did. When the cruiser car arrived, the prowlers had vanished. Patterson said nothing was missing.

Army Weighs Bridge vs. Poker

St. Louis (AP).—Mrs. E. N. Carlson seconded Maj. Gen. Ellard A. Walsh's motion that card playing will boost Army morale—but declared bridge is the game. A contract expert, Mrs. Carlson is directing a series of bridge games for soldiers—and their female partners—at the USO Center. She said:

"Bridge is an excellent morale builder. It makes the player think. Soldiers who spend their spare time playing bridge are not likely to lose morale." Gen. Walsh, Thirty-fourth Division commander, said in St. Paul that more poker playing would develop "real soldiers."

Novgorod, Taken By Nazis, Was Russia's 'Birthplace'

Novgorod, reported yielded to the Germans yesterday, was the first capital of the state of Old Russia, says the National Geographic Society.

"In the Kremlin of Novgorod stands a monument commemorating the 100th anniversary in 1862 of the founding of Russia on that site. The city rose from a cluster of hamlets built by a Scandinavian prince, Rurik, who led to the region forces of Northmen. The Finns called these bold warriors by a name which possibly was the source of the Slav term for them—Russi, which gave Russia its name.

"Novgorod (New-town), whose power once extended from the Baltic to the Volga and from the White Sea to the Dnieper River, and whose population in the fourteenth century may have reached 400,000, is today a small city with sawmills, and shoe, candle, and brick factories. It is situated on both banks of the navigable Volkhov River, two miles below that stream's outflow from large Lake Ilmen and about 100 miles south of Leningrad.

"Around the high ground the city occupies are swamps and lowlands, flecked with hundreds of lakes and extensive forests.

"Encircled by old walls, Novgorod preserves many splendid relics of its medieval golden age. Within the massive Kremlin is the Byzantine-style Sophia Cathedral. There are many old churches, museums, monastery buildings and historic towers and memorials. The left bank (western) part of the town, with the Kremlin and cathedral, is known as the 'Sophia Side;' the right bank section is called the 'Commercial Side.' A bridge joins the two.

"Early mention of Novgorod, both by Arab and Scandinavian chroniclers, showed the city's strategic commercial position astride the trade routes between the Baltic and Black Seas. At the height of its influence a common saying was, 'Who can resist God and Novgorod the Great?'

"Rurik, who was invited with his followers to Novgorod late in the ninth century to protect the city from the Slavs to the south, made the city the capital of the kingdom of Novgorod, which later was a part of Old Russia."

Duke of Kent Honored At White House Dinner

By Dudley Harmon

The Duke of Kent—whom Mrs. Roosevelt characterized yesterday at her press conference as thoughful, shy, and rather like his brother, King George—was honor guest at a dinner given last night by the President and First Lady.

The party was small and informal—only 16 were asked to meet the Duke. This must have pleased him, for his hostess pointed out yesterday that the royal visitor welcomed informal affairs. She described how delighted he was that nothing socially strenuous had been arranged for him over his Hyde Park weekend. Instead, the Duke went riding Sunday morning and had a swim with the family in the afternoon.

Sir Ronald Ian Campbell, British Minister and Charge d'Affaires, was of course a member of the dinner party. Two surprise guests were Capt. Lord and Lady Mountbatten, who arrived in this country last week. The former will take command of the ship Illustrious which is being repaired at Norfolk, Va. He is a cousin of the British royal family. His wife is here to tour the country and thank from the lecture platform Americans who are helping England. Later this week Lord and Lady Mountbatten are expected to visit Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt at her Newport home, Beaulieu. Their two young children, great-great-granddaughters of Queen Victoria, are her guests "for the duration."

Harry Hopkins Among Guests

Wing Commander Sir Louis Greig, who is serving as the Duke's aide, was also among the guests last evening. Others at the small party were J. A. Lowther, Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Corps; the Chief of Naval Aeronautics, Rear Admiral John H. Towers and Mrs. Towers; Mrs. Cameron Clark, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Field, Harry L. Hopkins, the Coordinator of Latin-American Relations and Mrs. Nelson A. Rockefeller and Capt. and Mrs. James Roosevelt. Capt. Roosevelt is on duty in Washington and he and his wife are guests at the White House.

Today the Duke is more or less the property of the British Embassy, which is taking him under its wing. Bright and early this morning he will visit Glenn L. Martin airplane plant, in Baltimore. He will return to Washington to attend a reception at the National Press Club from 6 to 7. Immediately afterward there will be a small private party for him at the embassy and afterward he will return to Canada.

Mrs. Roosevelt said at her press conference yesterday that on the Duke's Hyde Park visit he arranged to have a visit with his godchild, now in this country. The little girl's mother was killed by a London bomb several months ago and the child is staying with a family of musicians in Fairfield, Conn. She was brought to Hyde Park for the day and spent the afternoon swimming and taking tea with the Duke and the Roosevelts at Hyde Park.

No doubt the considerate First Lady provided plenty of fruit last night for dinner. The Duke, according to Mrs. Roosevelt, is on ration cards, the same as any other Londoner, and confessed to his hostess that he hadn't seen a banana or an orange for months. She quoted him as saying that his cook had quite a problem arranging menus.

Mrs. Roosevelt came to Washington especially to be hostess to the Duke and will return to New York Thursday. From there she will go to Hyde Park until the morning after Labor Day, which will find her back in Washington. On Tuesday afternoon, September 3, the White House will be the scene of a conference called by Dean William F. Russell, of Teachers College, Columbia University. The conference will include educators and WPA officials and will discuss best ways of carrying on a program for citizenship education throughout the country. The conference will apply particularly to the 1,750,000 who have applied for naturalization papers and the five million aliens who registered under the alien law last year.

Denies She'll Go to England

Mrs. Roosevelt said yesterday that a report she would fly to England by bomber next week was all news to her. She added that nobody had asked her to go to London and that she would not do so unless told to.

The First Lady registered pleasure at her press conference that local draft boards had promised to cooperate in aiding draftees released from Army service. She said she thought it excellent that they had promised to help the boys get their jobs back or find new ones.

Tanned and healthy from her summer vacation, Mrs. Roosevelt added that she was already following Mr. Ickes' order to save gas by planning carefully her automobile trips. She said that she no longer drove for pleasure, but only to get places.

A shortage of silk stockings will not particularly bother Mrs. Roosevelt. She told her press conference yesterday that for years she had worn cotton stockings on many occasions, especially in the summer.

Lieut. Carbonell. Bride on Trip

Lieut. and Mrs. Arthur Joseph Carbonell, who were married August 23 at the Shrine of the Blessed Sacrament Church, are en route to Carlisle, Pa., where they will make their home. Mrs. Carbonell is the former Miss Lucy Catherine Hammett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Hammett, of Chevy Chase, and Lieut. Carbonell is the son of Col. and Mrs. Arturo Carbonell, of West Point, N. Y.

Msgr. Thomas G. Smyth performed the wedding ceremony, and Mrs. John A. Moreland played the wedding music.

White gladioli decorated the shrine where the bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of ivory satin made on princess lines, with a sweetheart neckline and a long train. The long sleeves came to a point over the hands. The fingertip ivory tulle veil was held in place by a tiara of orange blossoms. White carnations, gladioli and lilies of the valley formed the bridal bouquet.

Bride's Sister Is Maid of Honor

The bride's sister, Miss Genevieve C. Hammett, was maid of honor. She wore a roseglow taffeta gown, made on princess lines, with a square neckline and long fitted sleeves. A tulle roseglow veil was held in place by a small spray of talisman roses and blue delphiniums which matched the bouquet she carried.

Miss Margaret Phillips, Miss Alice Phillips and Miss Rita Raley were the other attendants. All three wore powder blue taffeta gowns made like that of the maid of honor, with matching tulle veils, and carried boquets of talisman roses and blue delphimiums.

Reception at Home Follows Ceremony

Waldo Carbonell, of West Point, N. Y., was his brother's best man, and the ushers were the bride's brother, Joseph C. Hammett; Lieut. Herbert Block, U.S.M.C., of Carlisle, Pa.; Edward Redman, and Charles Redman, both of this city. A reception at the home of the bride's parents in Northampton Street followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Hammett, mother of the bride, wore a gown of beige lace with a corsage of talisman roses, and Mrs. Carbonell, mother of the groom, wore a gown of moss green crepe with a corsage of gardenias.

For traveling, the bride wore a green crepe dress with luggage assessories and a corsage of talisman roses.

The bride was graduated from Holy Cross Academy, Strayer College, and attended George Washington University. The bridegroom was graduated from George Washington University Medical School and is assigned to active duty in the Medical Corps of the United States Army at Carlisle, Pa.

Easy Exercise Will End That Summer Bulge

By Ida Jean Kain

IF YOU relaxed and let yourself go this summer, you're going to get quite a shock when you stand before the triple vision fitting room mirrors in your pink silk slip. You will find, to your horror, that nature's girdle has a two-way stretch—and it's no help to your silhouette.

You will see at a glance that it's going to take more than boning to get you back in shape. It's going to take exercise. But how you dread it! Exercise isn't really difficult and once you get into the routine of taking well-planned calesthenics every day, you won't want to miss them. They work wonders. That slack, pudgy feeling through the middle can be changed in a few weeks' time to a nice, firm, supple feeling. You'll look five years younger—and feel it too.

For Toning Muscles

So here we go—they are all easy exercises, but guaranteed to tone up lax and lazy muscles.

On your back on the floor, knees flexed, soles of feet on floor. Now pull up and in with the lower abdominal muscles. Whenever I show anyone these abdominal exercises, they never seem to know what I mean by "pulling up and in." I don't know how to explain it better except that you sort of dig the small of your back into the floor, and the only way to do that is forcibly pull up with the lower abdominal muscles, then pull in with these muscles as you press the backbone into the floor. If you can slip your hand under your back at your waistline, you're not pulling up and in! The whole back should be flat against the hard floor. Hold and release and repeat ten times.

That is only the preliminary. From there you go on with the exercises, but the idea is to keep your back against the floor as you exercise. Leave one knee bent with foot on floor, but stretch the other leg down. Now raise the leg that is stretched down on the floor, flex the knee and bring it up toward the chest. Stretch leg down on floor again and repeat 6 times; later 12 times. Repeat with the other leg.

Second Sleep

Progress from these by keeping one knee flexed, foot on floor and raising the leg that is stretched on floor up to right angles, keeping the knee straight. As you raise the leg, pull up with the lower abdominal muscles and keep the back against the floor. Perform 6 times, later 12, and repeat with opposite leg.

Finish with side-scissors: Lying on the side on floor, legs stretched down, knees straight, hand on floor in front of check for support. Now, raising the legs just a bit off the floor to get a free swing, swing one leg out in front as the other one goes back, in a scissors motion, making the excursion as wide as you can, but swinging freely and rhythmically. After you work up to it, swing 50 counts on one side, resting between each 10 counts. Then lie on the other side and swing 50 counts.

Casual Clothes For Active Women

Casuals, the byword on campus and at the office, take on a singular importance to the woman working in defense. She may not be earning a salary or have the status of a working girl, but she is a busy woman and needs clothes that are easy to slip into. Casuals fill the bill because they eliminate frou-frou and unnecessary fullness by concentrating on chic styling and simple lines. At left is the two-piece look in a worsted-like classic of Eastman rayon. The jacket's slit patch pockets provide a novel touch, while the snug inset waistband insures a trim fit. At right is a new edition of a budget casual in a smooth, lightweight rayon weave. Below-the-shoulder shirring gives soft flattery in the bodice. Wear the convertible collar up or down

Made for roominess, note the action pleat in the gored skirt above. Just a little bit military are the hip-pocket buttons on the dress (right)

Housemaid Contributes to Discussion of Servant Problem; Says Most Women Seem to Think They Can Get Efficient Help for Starvation Wages

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A letter signed "Regular Reader," published in your column of August 22, says: "I think you are mistaken in supposing there are maids for hire who would keep a home running smoothly, in apple-pie order." The writer takes the attitude that there isn't a maid in a million "worth her salt." I would like to give your correspondent the maid's side of the story. Maybe I can tell her why she can't keep good help.

The fault is not always with the maid. In this world we can only hope to get what we pay for. And a woman can't expect to get efficient household help for starvation wages, although most women seem to think they can. When I am engaged as a maid I expect to do maid's work. But before a week is up, nine employers out of ten want me to do the cooking and the laundry in addition. In other words, the work of three for the wages of one.

Then again, 99 per cent of the people treat their help as if she were a piece of machinery; as if she never gets tired or has any feelings whatsoever. And as for the living quarters for help, in most places it is awful. All of the old broken-down furniture is put in the maid's room. The beds sag in the middle like hammocks. And after sleeping (or trying to sleep) on such a bed, who would feel like working next day?

I have encountered a few (a very few) women who were considerate employers and treated their help as human beings. I worked for one such woman for nearly three years and left her employment only because she was moving to a distant State and I didn't care to leave Washington. I have been on my present job for almost three years and my employer is very considerate. Both of us are satisfied. She doesn't expect me to do the work of several. When there are to be several guests she gets extra help. And on my day off I really get the day off; not off after 4 p. m., or later.

When you work for a person like that you will work until you drop and never complain. In fact, there is nothing you wouldn't gladly do. But I have worked in some homes where no matter how much you did, nor how hard you tried to please, nothing was ever right. Nothing but fault-finding all day long. And when it looked as if you might be going to have a few minutes' spare time, something was found for you to do, as though it would be a crime to catch your breath. Who would stay in a place like that? Not me!

Until people realize that the days of slavery are long past, and learn to treat their household help as human beings, they cannot expect to get efficient help at prevailing wages. HOUSEMAID.

Houseworker Tells What Good Maid Expects

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a constant reader of your column and I admire you very much. I hope you live long to continue the good work you are doing. I am writing in answer to "Regular Reader," who loudly lamented in your column on Friday that there is no such thing as a perfect maid. I couldn't help laughing at the way she expressed herself, but she made me indignant, too, because it seemed to me that she didn't think before speaking.

Being a maid myself, perhaps I can give her some helpful pointers. Apparently "Regular Reader" is looking for perfection, which doesn't exist. There are no perfect human beings, either maids or mistresses. And there must be something radically wrong with her household if she hasn't been able to keep the one or two maids who were satisfactory. The very fact that she showered them with kindness, and still they ran out on her, shows that something is wrong. Maybe she wasn't willing to pay them what they were worth.

Give a maid a decent living wage, pleasant working conditions, reasonable working hours with some time to herself, other than the customary Thursday and Sunday afternoons off, and treat her as a human being instead of a machine and you will never have any trouble getting or keeping good help. Of course, there are people on both sides of the fence who will try to take advantage if they think they can. But if "Regular Reader" is a fair judge of human nature she will hire a good character to begin with.

ANOTHER DAILY READER.

She No Longer Has Trouble With Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Like "Regular Reader," I, too, have had my patience sorely tried by the "servant problem." Once I, too, thought it was impossible to get competent help. Then, one day, I sat down to think the thing through. Imaginatively I put myself in their place. I thought of their side of the story—working long hours for little money and (in many cases) even less encouragement. I decided to try a new tack.

I called a well known agency and asked them to send me the best woman they had, salary no object; I just wanted to be sure she wasn't slovenly or ignorant. They sent me a woman aged 36. I told her I would pay her $10 to start, and if she proved to be what I wanted she would get more. I outlined my requirements and told her that no maid, so far, has measured up. She submitted, respectfully, that I had probably been expecting too much of "cheap help." She said that there are "classes" of servants, just as there are "classes" of other people. She said those who work for $6 to $10 a week always give trouble.

Well, that was six years ago. In the interim she has proved to be not only a good maid but an excellent housekeeper and wonderful manager. She has had three raises in salary since she has been with us and I have been spared any further "servant trouble." She takes pride in her work and plans most of our meals, in addition to preparing and serving them to a nicety. She is an excellent "personal maid," too. I have only to say we are going on a trip and she attends to packing just the right clothes for the family (which includes my husband and two half-grown children). She keeps my shopping list for me, and also a list of my engagements.

And while she washes windows and polishes furniture and floors as part of her routine, she is pardonably vain about her well-kept hands. Once, when I remarked their nice appearance, she told me, "Dishpan hands is just laziness." There may be a moral in this somewhere for "Regular Reader," who says that her quest for a dependable maid has resulted, so far, only in disappointment plus "dishpan hands."

Greenwich Village Studio Today More Comfortable Than 'Arty'

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

GREENWICH VILLAGE has been a symbol of Bohemian adventure and romance for many a generation of ambitious young writers, artists and actors from coast to coast. It had been so long celebrated in legend that it almost seems as though it should belong among the mythical places, like Sylvania or Oz. But Greenwich Village is a very real neighborhood, as active and busy today as at any time in its long history—only it doesn't look quite so picture-post-cardish as many outsiders have imagined it.

True enough it still is a favorite haunt of artists and writers, but not many of them have long hair. Actually there are a lot more tailored young business people, especially from the advertising fraternity, living in the Village than there are artists. And there's an Italian section that wends its way in and out of the artier neighborhoods—you know the blocks by the vegetable stands and babies that crowd the sidewalks.

Sedate Residences There

In other parts of the Village there are sedate old residences and slick modern apartments—Mrs. Roosevelt has her apartment down on one of these streets, and the Tony Sarges have lived thereabouts for years.

Landmarks include Mark Twain's house on lower Fifth Avenue, Bret Harte's house on Grove Street and Edna St. Vincent Millay's old quarters on Bedford Street in a house just 7 feet 8 inches wide. Gene Tunney grew up in the Village and Sinclair Lewis spent a good many early working years there. A garden club meets regularly in the Village and exhibits some of the nicest backyard and roof gardens in New York.

The story of the Village goes much farther back than its Bohemian era, however. Once upon a time it was away uptown, instead of being, as it is now, away downtown. Much of it originally belonged in two farm tracts—one the Minetta farm, the other the Randall farm. The latter is still intact as an estate, being owned by the Sailor's Snug Harbor on Staten Island, a retreat for retired mariners, and pretty well heeled they are because of this property.

Still Some Atmosphere

There are still plenty of old houses in the Village which have been remodeled into quaint apartments, and there are skylight studios to be had, but you'll find few garrets to starve in any more. But there are two gas lamps left to light MacDougal Alley at night, and St. Luke's Chapel still gives out "six-penny wheaten loaves" to the poor each week in accord with a bequest of over a hundred years ago.

The Time Has Come For Longer Skirts Dietrich Avers

Hollywood, Calif. — Because women are extremists and never relinquish a fashion until it has been played to the hilt, Marlene Dietrich is of the opinion that the psychological time has arrived to lengthen skirts. Hers for daytime will be at a new calf length, which she believes will be the accepted one for fall. Women are getting tired of short skirts, according to the star.

The new longer bodice lines make the adding of a few flattering inches to hems a necessity if one wants to have a balanced silhouette, she adds. Then, if a girl actually dislikes hiding a pretty knee, she may slash her skirt up one side and still be right with the mode. That was the theme of many of Miss Dietrich's clothes in her latest picture.

Price Control Needed, Says Miss Elliott

Stating that we can have "guns and butter too," Harriet Elliott, director of the consumers' division of OPACS, asserted that America could maintain a good standard of living if the variety of the consumer market was cut down and prices were controlled, at the National Catholic Community Service's "Institute for Defense," last night.

The institute is being held by the women's division of the N. C. C. S. as a training school for field personnel in USO and community center projects operated by the organization.

Miss Elliott deplored the fact that some retailers will not cooperate in the maintenance of "fair prices," and declared that the country must have a price control law. Unless such a bill is passed, she said, "inflation will be just as certain to come as anything in the world."

"Business as usual and living as usual is out," she said, "and simplification is undoubtedly coming."

She urged students attending the session to try to teach people the value of conservation, and to help them understand the need, use and advantage of substitutes. The importance of buying intelligently cannot be overestimated, she added.

Speaking on the program with Miss Elliott were Dr. Helen Mitchell, nutrition director of the staff of the coordinator of health, welfare and related defense activities; Carl Monsees, assistant to the defense housing coordinator, and Dr. Dean Clark, of the Public Health Service.

Infantile Paralysis Cases Here Up to 23

Four new cases of infantile paralysis in the District were reported yesterday to the Health Department, bringing the total number of cases to 23.

Health Department officials said the number is a decided increase over that of last year but that there is no reason for alarm. All of the patients were 15 years of age or less, the department said.

Grand Jury Returns 34 Indictments

The District grand jury yesterday handed up to Justice David A. Pine some 34 indictments, which in cold and formal languages told these tales from real life in a world capital:

Bell Bottom Red came to grief because Charles M. Henderson, Alexandria, has a knack of remembering figures, such as seat numbers. When a pickpocket got Henderson's wallet on a street car the night of June 28, Henderson did not despair. He recalled the seat numbers of two tickets for the ball game which were in the wallet. He went to the park next day, sat in one of them and waited. When a man appeared with one of the tickets, Henderson called in Detective Bernard D. Crooks, of the Thirteenth Precinct. A long chain of gifts and sales led Crooks to Victor L. Williams, (alias Bell Bottom Red), 41, who was indicted yesterday.

And trash cans, the grand jurors found, often hold more than trash. Some weeks ago, a policeman decided that the cans behind the liquor store at 705 Fourteenth Street Northwest were, as the phrase is, suspicious. And sure enough, under the trash he found several bottles of spirits. The grand jurors charged that three porters in the store planted the bottles, to be found by three trash wagon drivers. All six were indicted.

According to the grand jurors, Messrs. Raymond B. O'Neal and Vernon Nace were going great guns in the housebreaking and larceny trade, until the police interfered and had them indicted ten times each.

And the grand jurors charged that three youths and a girl chose Judiciary Square itself to "roll" a drunk. The prospective victim turned out to be quite sober and groaned so effectively that officers came to his aid.

Sheer fiction, said the grand jurors, were the tales Gordon Blalock, 46, automobile salesman, told Mrs. Hallit T. White, Arlington, Va., about his being an officer of a prominent company. On the strength of it, the jury said, Mrs. White lent Blalock $1800.

The transaction was boiled down to a charge of false pretenses and it was the reason the grand jury reported yesterday instead of today. If they had waited until Tuesday, as usual, the Blalock indictment would have been returned exactly three years after he is alleged to have gotten the money, and would have been worthless. As it is, the case beat the statute of limitations by exactly 12 hours and 15 minutes.

The charges against those indicted were:

Receiving Stolen Property—James E. Harris 39, Negro.

Unauthorized use of automobile—Howard Ellison, 29, Negro; James Moormann 19, Negro; Henry T. Copeland, 22, Negro; Charles F. Wells, 19, Negro; Alexandr Lomax, 19, Negro; Carl Robinson, 31, Negro.

Assault with dangerous weapon—John A. Watson, 59, Negro; Tilden Hunt, 26, Negro; Clifton U. Greene, 22, Negro; Daisy Johnson, 26, Negro.

WPA to Train Recreation Aides

A five million dollar Nation-wide Works Projects Administration program to provide trained leaders for the operation of recreation centers in military industrial defense areas was announced yesterday by Howard O. Hunter, commissioner of works projects.

The project, approved by the President, has been certified by the Secretary of War as important to national defense and will operate in close conjunction with private local agencies and military authorities in 350 areas.

Many of the workers will assist local recreation agencies in towns near military reservations and in expanding industrial centers. Others will work directly under military authorities on the reservations.

Federal Pay Raises Urged By Ramspeck

Representative Ramspeck (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the House Civil Service Committee, yesterday advocated salary adjustments for Federal employes in order to help them meet rising costs of living, the Associated Press reported. In a talk yesterday before the thirty-seventh biennial convention of the United National Association of Postoffice Clerks, he said that Government workers lacked the privilege of collective bargaining and that steps should be taken in their behalf to "relieve the cost of living pressure with some flat increases in salaries."

Heads of Government unions here agreed with the Representative. James B. Burns, national president of the American Federation of Government Employes which he said has a membership of more than 30,000 persons declared: "I agree with him thoroughly. Living costs have gone up between 18 and 20 per cent. Our organization has a constitutional provision against strikes."

Luther Steward, sr., national president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, which he said has a membership of nearly 75,000 workers, said: "Representative Ramspeck's observations are perfectly sound and in strict recognition of present day conditions."

Fraser Here To Confer With Roosevelt

Prime Minister Peter Fraser of New Zealand arrived in Washington last night after a transatlantic flight from Foynes, Ireland. He will confer with President Roosevelt at noon today.

The prime minister refused to reveal what subjects might be discussed with the President, but he indicated that the Far Eastern crisis would figure in the talk. He declared last night that the situation in the Pacific is "serious but not irretrievable."

"I feel that once Japan has grasped the fact that while the United States and Britain are always willing to maintain friendship with any nation, they will oppose an act of aggression," Fraser said.

The New Zealand Prime Minister will also confer with Secretary of State Hull and other high United States officials during his few days stay here. He expects to go from here to New York, then to Canada, and then to San Francisco, where he will take a clipper ship for New Zealand in about two weeks.

UFWA Call Mason's Stand 'Undemocratic'

Officials of the United Federal Workers of America, C. I. O. affiliate, yesterday attacked as "in opposition to the fundamental principle of democracy" the recent statement of Commissioner Guy Mason that the Commissioners are opposed to the formation of any more local U. F. W. A. chapters in "such strictly Governmental instrumentalities as the jail, workhouse, reformatory, police, fire and health departments."

The U. F. W. A. declared that Mason told a member of the organization's national office in a phone conversation he would "fire" any U. F. W. A. member at Occaquan Reformatory and Lorton Jail.

There are chapters at both institutions, the organization's officers said, adding that "In the Federal service, at the Atlanta and Leavenworth Penitentiaries, the U. F. W. A. has organized locals without interference from the national Administration."

In a formal statement the organization declared:

"It is ill-becoming for the District of Columbia Commissioners, in this hour of danger to democratic institutions throughout the world, to set themselves in opposition to the fundamental principle of democracy which permits a worker to join a union.

"The U.F.W.A. ranks are open to all government workers who desire to better their wages and working conditions through union organizations. They will continue to remain open."

Tree Conference Opens Here Today

The seventeenth national shade tree conference opens today. Representative Jennings Randolph, chairman of the House District Committee, will extend a welcome to the more than 400 delegates and more than 100 wives. Dr. Ernest N. Cory, president of the conference, will reply and officially open the meeting.

War Building Bill Is Signed With Doubts

President Roosevelt yesterday signed the Army supply bill that calls for construction of a 35-million-dollar Army Office Building in Arlington, Va., but at the same time he told Congress he did not consider the clause providing for the building's location as mandatory.

The President, who opposes a Congress-approved plan to build the structure at the Virginia end of Memorial Bridge, said he "will have a statement" on the office building proposal. It may be issued today.

The Presidential statement is expected to take advantage of flexibility in the language of the appropriation law by telling Congress that the office building—"largest in the world"—will be built on a compromise Arlington site so as not to mar the view of National Cemetery and the Lee Mansion.

The seven-billion-dollar Army funds bill which he signed into law yesterday, merely appropriates 35 million dollars for an Army office building to be erected on the old Arlington Experimental Farm, or adjoining land, but does not specify any specific location on the farm tract.

Mr. Roosevelt is understood to favor placing the building on the Quartermaster Depot site, on the eastern end of the farm, near Columbia Pike. Congress wanted to build at the western end of the farm, a location attacked by the President as a potential eyesore.

The White House statement said: "The President has signed H. R. 5412—paying supplemental appropriatoins for national defense fiscal year ending 1942, and including the item of 35 million dollars for the construction of the new building for the War Department.

"And the President will have a statement relating to the provisions of the bill carrying the War Department Building appropriation. This provision of the bill is not considered to be mandatory."

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

SEC Can Move 175 Employes to Field

Securities and Exchange Commission has reported to the Budget Bureau that it can move between 175 and 200 of its employes to the field, which would free around 32,000 square feet of office space here for defense agencies. It's planned to build up the field registration offices at Cleveland and San Francisco and possibly to establish another office in Chicago. The reorganization division may be moved out, all or in part, to Philadelphia or some other nearby city except New York. New York is campaigning for the SEC but it hasn't a chance of getting it. Some members of the legal staff also will be sent to the field offices.

Solicitor General Biddle has been appointed Attorney General by default. The man who defaulted was Supreme Court Justice Frank Murphy who refused an appeal from the President to step down from the high court to resume his old position as Uncle Sam's chief law enforcement officer. The stories have been the other way around—Murphy is anxious to get off the court—and if that's so he had a grand opportunity and turned it down.

The proposal to run the Baltimore & Ohio trains from suburban Maryland through the Union Station to stops at the stations at Seventh and D Streets and Fourteenth and Water Streets Southeast is gaining attention. The Agriculture Department is planning to make a survey of the transportation systems used by its employes in the hopes of devising plans to save gasoline. Each employe will be asked to answer a questionnaire and one of the questions asked will be whether the B. & O. service would be used if it were provided. The railroad company is certain to get interested seriously if a sufficient number at Agriculture would ride the trains. The B. & O. also is giving attention to another proposal by Federal workers that trains from Maryland suburbs be routed over the spur line to Georgetown.

Five-Day Week Urged To Save Gasoline

Still another group of Government workers have a gas-saving plan. They suggest that Federal employes be worked a five-day, 40-hour week instead of the present 39-hour, 5½ day week. During the emergency the employes recognize the necessity of keeping the Government open for business six days a week and it's proposed that half the employes have Saturdays off and the other half take Mondays off. Seventeen per cent of the gas used by employes to travel to and from work could be saved by the plan.

Government employes who will be released from military service after September 1 will be installed in the jobs they left if they meet the requirements provided in the Selective Service Act. They must apply for their old jobs within 40 days and they must be qualified to fill them again. Reinstatement of the draftees will be an administrative matter that will be worked out between the Civil Service Commission and the individual agencies. Federal workers won't lose seniority or status by having served in the armed forces. Nor can they be reduced in grade or pay for 18 months after they return.

The National Guard Bureau of the War Department is set up serve a peace-time guard. With the guard now in the Regular Army, work at the bureau has slumped and employes are and will be transferred from it to other bureaus within the department . . . N. F. F. E., whose national convention will open Monday at Atlantic City, is running an all-expense tour to New York City over Labor Day. Reservations can be made by calling Metropolitan 2066 . . .

Unlike the Navy, War Department has few of its employes on night shifts. War has 139 males and 48 females working before midnight and 172 males and 67 females working after midnight . . . The new War cafeteria will be opened around October 1, which will reduce the length of time it now takes for employes to get lunch. Employes are supposed to get 30 minutes for lunch but most of them take around an hour because of the overcrowded cafeterias.

Watch Seeks Its Owner

Playmates Bury Buddy, 7, Victim of Hit-and-Run Auto

THE COFFIN bearing the body of Francis (Buddy) Armitage, 7, killed by a hit-run driver, is borne from a funeral home by playmates

A 72-year-old crippled man leaned on his crutch and tugged at his white mustache as he watched four little boys in white carry the coffin of Francis (Buddy) Armitage up the steps and into St. Mary's Catholic Church yesterday.

"He was my best little playboy," Joseph Whitfield, of 708 Fifth Street Northwest, a friend of all the boys in the neighborhood, said sadly while the church bells chimed.

Last Friday afternoon 7-year-old Buddy Armitage was struck by a hit-and-run automobile in the 400 block of I Street Northwest, hurled 38 feet by the impact, and left dead in the street.

Yesterday, boys and girls, some in their Sunday best, some dressed in their afternoon playclothes, filed silently in St. Mary's Church to hear the Rev. John H. Zerhusen say prayer over his former pupil. Buddy was a student at St. Mary's School and received religious instruction from the priest in other days.

Buddy's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Armitage, of 905 Fifth Street Northwest, and his three sisters, Helen, 12; Dorothy, 15, and Elizabeth, 16, also knelt in the church and heard the low-voiced prayers.

After the brief service, four of Buddy's playmates carried the white flower-decked coffin outside. They were Paul Svoboda, 15, of 621 I Street Northwest; Francis Healey, 13, of 205 C Street Northwest; Robert Walter, 13, of 813 Hamilton Street Northwest, and William Virgin, 13, of 905 Fifth Street Northwest.

Fortune Gallo presents the Original Ballets Russes on Monday night at the Potomac Watergate. Conductor: Alexander Smallens. Program: Cimarosiana (music by Cimarosa); Les Presages (music by Chaikovski, Prince Igor (music by Borodin).

Clouds which had distressed the day with showers and high humidity gave way last evening to a clear sky for the benefit of the Original Ballets Russes presenting the third program of a week's engagement at the Potomac Watergate. Before some 4000 spectators the choreographic entertainment began with the ballet divertissement, "Cimarosiana" which the troupe had not offered on any previous visit to Washington. Balletomanes will excuse the explanation to the uninitiated that a ballet has an action plot while a ballet divertissement has none, consisting of what vaudevillians used to call specialty dances.

BROWN

This particular set contained eight numbers spaced as duets, trios, quartets, sextets and ensembles. The stage onlooker and occasional performers were costumed to represent characters in the old commedia dell'arte. Costumes accorded well with the music arranged for the sequences from various stages works of Domenico Cimarosa, who was an exceedingly popular composer at the close of the eighteenth century.

Aside from its color and variety, the novelty was primarily interesting by virtue of Cimarosa's music, which has the charm of piquant melodies, humor and gayety. While he composed some religious music and serious stage works, Cimarosa made his successes with comic operas.

The company's major offering was "Les Presages," repeated from Saturday night. It is a brave attempt to express through symbolism the emotional content of Chaikovski's fifth symphony as the struggle of men against destiny. The weakness of this kind of symbolic choreography is that it ventures too close to the line between the sublime and the ridiculous. The figure of Fate, for example, in this ballet is anything but terrifying in aspect.

Gas Rationing Plan Drafted, Just in Case

Van Duzer Devises Cards to Be Used if Voluntary Program Is Unsuccessful

Issuance of gasoline rationing cards for Washington motorists became a possibility yesterday.

It was disclosed that Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer has already devised a ration card which is now under consideration by the District's Petroleum Conservation Committee. Announcement of the card was made by Assistant Engineer Commissioner Beverly C. Snow to scotch reports that these cards have been printed and are ready to be distributed among the Capital's motorists. It was declared that the cards would not be distributed unless voluntary conservation of gasoline is a failure.

At the same time, Price Administrator Leon Henderson was making a study of the increases in gasoline prices. The Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply said that a "workable plan" to combat these increases is being worked out.

Understanding Reached

Quinn Shaughnessy, head of the fuel price section of OPACS, said that no immediate steps for governmental control were being considered. He indicated, however, that additional instances of price boosting would bring quick action. He said the more probable method of control would be the imposition of a price ceiling on gasoline.

Shaughnessy said that OPACS had reached an understanding with major oil companies that they would not increase gas prices without first notifying the Government. He indicated that as a last resort the Government might ask the oil companies to refuse to supply gasoline to retailers whose prices were too high. This, however, he said, would not be done until other means had been exhausted.

The Maloney resolution, calling for a Senate investigation of the Eastern gasoline "shortage," will be considered by the Senate Commerce Committee at a meeting this morning.

Favored by Bailey

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, indicated he favored a Senate inquiry by his committee.

Bailey said he wanted to find out why 17,500 rail tank cars, which Association of American Railroads spokesmen recently said were available, have not been called into use to alleviate the shortage.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, urged a Congressional investigation of the gasoline situation. The local division of the A. A. A. yesterday also launched a thorough investigation to determine what is happening to the retail gasoline price structure in Washington and suburbs.

R. K. Davies, acting petroleum coordinator, yesterday called upon the oil industry to withhold from general use blending agents needed for production of 100-octane aviation fuel. It was said that high test motor fuel for automobiles could be manufactured with other blending agents not needed in production of the aviation gas.

How Plan Would Work

Details of Van Duzer's rationing card are as follows: A card would be sent monthly to each District car owner. It would be printed with numbers running from 1 to 30, presuming that 30 gallons a month would be the ration quota. A dealer would punch as many holes on the card as the number of gallons sold. Coupons would also be issued with the cards to prevent "bootlegging" by the dealer in selling more than the amount registered on the card. He would punch the amount sold on the coupon as well as the card, tear off the coupon and keep it. Each month he would be given a new supply of gasoline equivalent to the amount registered on the coupons for the previous month.

Tonight at 10:15, a program for gas conservation by employes of the Government will be described in the Federal Workers broadcast over station WINX. The program will be presented by the Petroleum Conservation Committee of Labor Department Local 12 of the U. F. W. A.

Driver Cleared In Year's 52d Traffic Death

A coroner's jury yesterday exonerated a driver in the death Saturday of James E. Johnson, 69, of the 1300 block of South Capitol Street, who was struck by an automobile August 19 at Third and D Streets Northeast.

Johnson, who was the fifty-second person killed in traffic this year, died in Casualty Hospital.

The death yesterday of Frederick L. Degges, 70, of 107 Thirty-sixth Street Northeast, in Casualty Hospital was attributed to natural causes. He had received slight injuries Saturday night when his car ran into cars lined up behind a traffic light in the 800 block of Seventh Street Northwest. Lieut. William Liverman, of the accident prevention unit, said the man died of a heart failure.

Four persons were injured when their car skidded into an electric pole at Minnesota Avenue and Sheriff Road Southeast yesterday morning. Treated at Garfield Hospital were Lucretia Lindsay, Negro, 19, of 1455 Q Street Northwest; William Henderson, Negro, 19, of 906 French Street Northwest; Leonard Gilusy, 19, Negro, 1806 Twelfth Street Northwest, and Pauline Daniels, Negro, 19, of 15 Quincy Street Northwest.

Frank Koch, 55, of 2231 Shannon Place Southeast, received slight injuries when struck by an automobile at Third Street and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Jury Holds Man In Stabbing Death

A coroner's jury yesterday ordered held for grand jury action a 35-year-old man in the fatal stabbing of Walter Boling, 49, of 931 Maryland Avenue Southwest on July 7. Boling died in Casualty Hospital Wednesday. The man being held is Raymond Richardson, Negro, of 406 Sixth Street Northwest.

The Post's Poll

2-3 of Voters Oppose New Time for D.C.

Nearly two-thirds of those who had submitted ballots in The Post's poll up to last night were opposed to daylight saving time for the District.

Yesterday 49 persons marked their ballots "yes" and 16 "no," bringing the total to 358 against and 259 for fast time.

Comments ran from scrawled penciled markings on the ballots to typewritten letters of several pages.

Mrs. Eleanor Morrell, of 622 Twenty-second Street Northwest, said, "Yes, it's about the most wonderful thing that could happen here."

Harry Findley said, "Yes, it's good for defense.

One letter read, "If they would call it summer time there would be less opposition."

Like many sports lovers favoring fast time, C. E. Morgan said, "It will give more time for needed outdoor exercise and set a good example for the Nation."

One opponent wrote in red pencil, "If we want to start work earlier all we have to do is to get up earlier. Changing the clock is just a nuisance. The sun still regulates the amount of daylight—at least it did yesterday!"

Another person said, "No. To get tion for its return about 1934. He to get up in the middle of the night now."

HONORED AT DINNER—Miss Mary Corbett was guest of honor at a dinner given last night upon her retirement from the Social Security Board. She is shown with William Mitchell, assistant executive director of SSB

One of Miss Mary Corbett's biggest regrets about retiring from the Social Security Board this week is that she will no longer have a typewriter to work on. So last night 40 of her fellow workers gave a dinner in her honor at 2929 Connecticut Avenue and presented her with a purse with which to buy herself a typewriter.

One of the first employes to retire from the young Social Security Board, Miss Corbett has worked in the business management service of the board since March, 1936, and was previously with the Geological Survey for more than 20 years. She was born in Arlington, Va., and looks a lot younger than her 70 years. She lives at 1940 Biltmore Street Northwest.

The purse was presented by William L. Mitchell, assistant executive director of the board. He and Miss Marian Hardy, chief of the general files section, made brief speeches in Miss Corbett's honor.

The girl, Miss Dorothy Ford, was due to arrive here Saturday evening, and was to have taken a cab from Union Station to 1727 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, to stay with a friend, Miss Jane Nielson.

Miss Ford has yet to show up at the Massachusetts Avenue address, nor has her family in Oklahoma heard from her since she left. Police last night were unable to determine whether the young woman had turned up yesterday at the FBI and planned to make further inquiries today.

Plans Begun To Find Jobs For Selects

Service Clubs Will Help Draft Boards Restore Discharged Men to Civil Life

Although next November is the earliest date that any local selectees will complete a year's service in the Army under Selective Service training, local draft headquarters already is preparing to get these men jobs when they return to civilian life, it was learned yesterday.

This was in line with the order on Monday of Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, to all State draft directors "to make certain" that citizen soldiers about to be released from military duty are "protected in their legal right to reemployment in civilian occupations."

Gen. Hershey appealed to civic organizations to aid in the reemployment program and those questioned in the District are responding with a will.

Local Boards to Aid

It was reported Monday that each local board would have a reemployment committeeman to help returning soldiers get their jobs back. Also, it was said, the United States Employment Service will be utilized largely.

Edwin Jones, director of the District Employment Center, said his office had a list of men who would need jobs when they were released from the Army. This excludes Government workers, whose jobs are guaranteed them upon their return, Jones said.

"Frankly," Jones declared, "We will be able to use a lot of them."

Algernon P. Reeves, president of the Rotary Club of Washington said, "We'll do all we can. I am sure, to help get service men jobs."

Kiwanis Making Plans

Dr. Oscar B. Hunter, president of the Kiwanis Club, said his organization was already making plans along this line. It is one of the questions which will be discussed here in the October convention of the Kiwanis Capital District, Dr. Hunter said.

E. A. Drumm, employment secretary of the Central Y.M.C.A. said "We will endeavor to place these men without cost of any kind." At the same time, L. W. DeGast, general secretary of the Central Y.M.C.A. declared his organization would be glad to issue free 30-day memberships to all returning service men just as was done after the last World War. Randolph E. Myers, membership secretary of the Central Y. M. C. A., said the organization is going to get in touch with various business men to find job vacancies.

Willliam C. Hanson, president of the Downtown Chapter of the Lion's Club, said, "I think you will find us ready to do our part."

The District American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and other service organizations have also indicated their willingness to help in the program, it was learned. They have not yet announced their plans, however. A veterans' employment system is already set up which will probably be used, it was said.

Capital Veteran Heads Cooties

Frank Topash, of 80 New York Avenue Northwest, was elected Supreme Seam Squirrel of the Military Order of the Cooties at the Veterans of Foreign Wars convention in Philadelphia last night. For the benefit of the uninitiated, that simply means that he was elected national head of the V. F. W. honorary society. What took place, the V. F. W. insists, was not an election, but a Supreme Scratch.

Topash is a civilian employee of the Navy Department, a member of the Front Line V. F. W. Post and of the Topnotch Tent of the Cooties.

Reports of 'Gas' Pilfering Mount

Another report of gasoline pilfering was added yesterday to a score of similar complaints received by Metropolitan Police since the 7 o'clock gas curfew went into effect here.

Joseph R. Kreeger, 3051 Idaho Avenue Northwest, reported that the cover o fhis gasoline tank and three gallons of gas were stolen from his car while i twas parked in front of his home Sunday night.

Working Girl Can Keep Good Looks

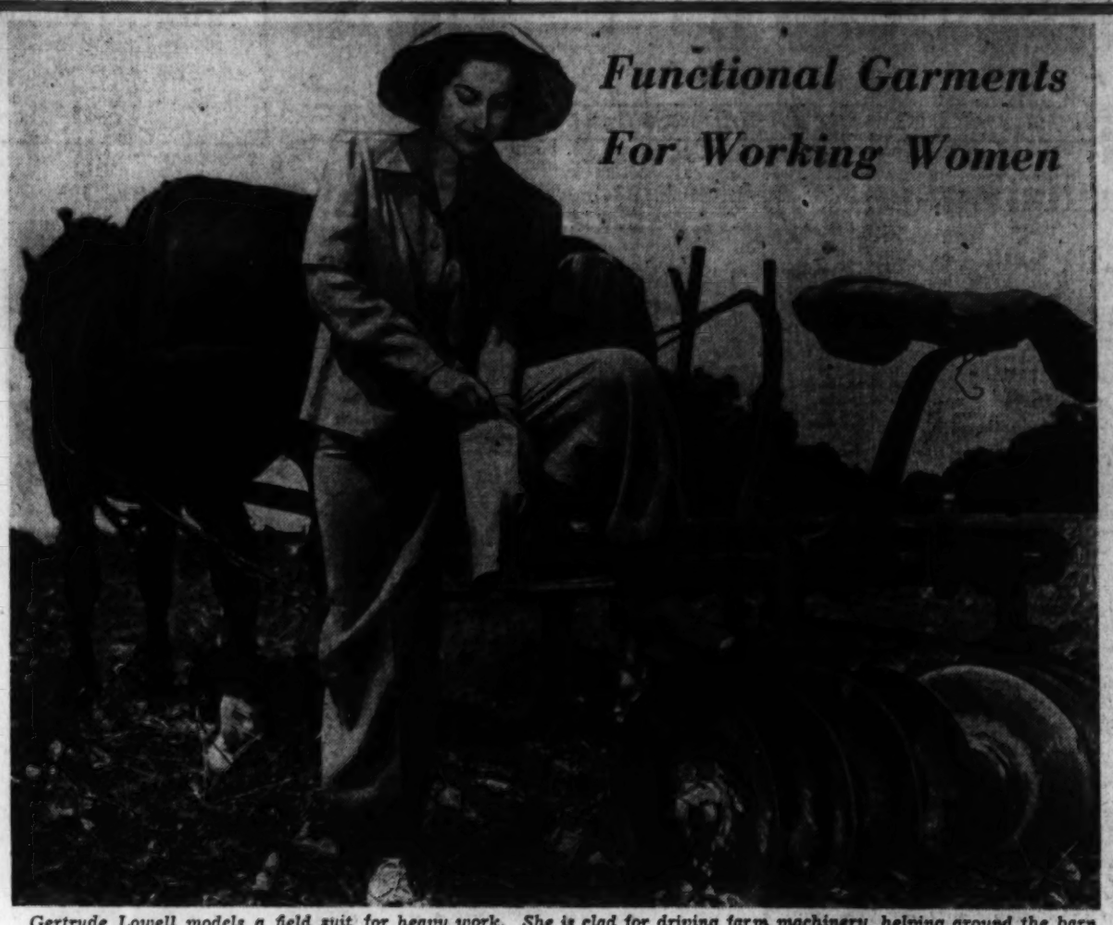
THAT the women of America may lose none of their good looks while working on defense jobs for Uncle Sam, the Bureau of Home Economics has designed a whole new set of "emergency" styles. They were modeled at the White House yesterday at one of Mrs. Roosevelt's press conferences, and will be on the market by 1942.

They were planned with both the farm girl and the industrial worker in mind, and to go well with cotton stockings.

Although they ran to trouser types, none was of the khaki or dark blue usually associated with "work pants." Soft, feminine colors in artistic combinations prevailed.

Biggest innovation was absence of buttons—and not much use of zippers. Snaps that can be put on with the hammer, and work much like those on gloves, were the rule.

Functional Garments For Working Women



Gertrude Lowell models a field suit for heavy work. She is clad for driving farm machinery, helping around the barn and caring for livestock

OTHER high fashion notes included:

Wide comfortable legs that can be snapped at bottom for safety around machines, and also as a barrier to insects and dirt.

Leggings made of shower-proof material and easily snapped on to wear in the fields or garden when the clover is damp.

A return to the old-fashioned slat bonnet—only this time you'd never know it, as it looks like a coolie hat or like a cap worn by railroad workers.

Slats, or cardboard, come out easily when "bonnet" needs laundering.

Detachable, long sleeves that can be worn when the sun shines hot, and snapped off when worker reaches the shade.

Waists designed for shoulder fullness, gathers often put in with elastic thread to permit a maximum of "give."

Washable and durable cottons were used throughout.

FOR jobs not requiring trousers, there were coverall aprons of heavy chambray, designed to look like jumper dresses. For women who desire the comfort of trousers but the "looks of a dress," culottes were modeled.

"We hope there is something here that will make for moral uplift," said Miss Clarice Scott, assistant director of the bureau and designer of the clothes. She said the bureau started work on the idea when the NYA asked for something for girls to wear on defense training jobs. They have been passed by various farm groups, she said, and will meet a distinct farmerette costume need.

MATERIALS in the outfits were kept as low cost as possible, rarely running above $2. Some of the aprons can be made for less than $1, Miss Scott said. One of the coverettes was cut in one piece and although the legs were large, took only 4 yards of material. A shower-proof coat of two layers of material, made with a hood, was shown as typical of what the bureau had in mind for a cold-weather garment—but it will be made up in a low-cost material before it is presented to the public.

Reds, British Move Against Nazis in Iran With World's Richest Oil Field at Stake

By the Associated Press

IRAN—modern Persia—borders Russia and lies as a stepping stone to the east between the Caspian Sea and the wealth of India.

The Moslem kingdom which derives its name from the ancient Aryans—the land of the Aryans—is regarded as the world's richest single oil field. The Anglo Iranian Oil Co., controlled in part by the British government, has a 60-year lease on 500,000 square miles of its land, roughly five-sixths of the nation's entire area.

Most of Iran is desert, over which roam three million nomads.

IRAN'S population is composed largely of people of the Sunni sect, but there also are Parsis, Jews, Armenians, Nestorians and some Christians. Last year the population of Teheran, the capital, was reported as 540,087.

The country has a constitutional monarch, Riza Khan Pahlevi, who was elected Shah December 13, 1925. Pahlevi was prime minister under the rule of Sultan Ahmed Shah, who was deposed in October, 1925.

Iran had been an absolute monarchy until 1906, when Mohammed Ali Shah yielded to pressure by the people and signed a constitution. He took the oath of kingship on October 8, 1907, but almost immediately attempted to overthrow the government. He was forced to abdicate and his son, Sultan Ahmed Shah, took over.

IRAN, Turkey, Iraq and Afghanistan signed a nonaggression pact in July, 1937, and the Teheran government had a similar pact with Russia, signed in 1921.

The Shah commands an army of about 190,000 civilian soldiers, drafted at the age of 21 for two years.

Iran's air force has been reported to have 13 planes, mostly of British construction.

A pocket navy of two sloops, five patrol vessels, tugs and motor patrol boats operates in the Caspian Sea and Persian Gulf. The ships were built by Italy.

Presenting Francis Biddle, Attorney General Designate

Philadelphian To Wear Official Mantle of Ancestor

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

EDMUND RANDOLPH, first Attorney General of the United States, was said to have winked yesterday from the heavy gilt frame that holds his oil portrait on the walls of the Justice Department.

His direct descendant, Francis Biddle, was named by President Roosevelt to the same Cabinet office—the highest legal post in the executive branch of the Government.

If you should see Biddle at an art exhibit around town—as many Washingtonians do—you could readily see in him the marks of a long American lineage, but you might not take him for the astute Philadelphia lawyer that he is.

A GLANCE at the vital statistics of his biography reveals why he is so trusted an aide of President Roosevelt. Biddle, like the President, attended exclusive Groton School and Harvard University. He went on to Harvard Law School, graduating cum laude, and then imbibed a restless brand of liberalism as law clerk for the famed late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Francis Biddle with Mrs. Biddle, son, Randolph, and their pet

This liberalism was also to the President's liking, for Biddle has been classed as a New Dealer ever since that phrase became a political hallmark.

His first big job for the New Deal was as chairman of the National Labor Relations Board in its infant days, 1934-35. Following that he was a Reserve Bank official and chief counsel to the Congressional committee that pried into TVA.

THOSE tasks led to a promotion to judgeship in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Biddle had a hand in deciding many basic New Deal court tests while serving in the important Philadelphia circuit court.

Former Clerk Of Justices Holmes Is New Dealer

When elevation of Robert H. Jackson to the Attorney Generalship in January, 1940, left vacant the post of Solicitor General, it was only natural that the President should call on his old schoolmate and fellow New Dealer to leave the bench and take that strategic Justice Department job. Biddle has been Solicitor General from January, 1940, until his nomination yesterday to a higher post.

BORN in Paris 55 years ago, Biddle is a member of a family that is as native to Philadelphia as the statue of William Penn. He has brown eyes, a friendly smile, a sandy mustache and freckles.

Biddle once tried his hand at novel-writing and is proud that his wife, who writes as Katherine Garrison Chapin, is a poet.

There'll Be Some Nat Changes Made

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—This year's Washington ball club has played 122 games as of tonight and it is very apparent that a rebuilding job is in order. The Nats are foredoomed to the second division again next season unless Clark Griffith comes up with a third baseman and two infielders.

POVICH

Despite the lofty team batting average of the Nats—they're second to the Red Sox in team hitting—they are a punchless sort of club, lacking that long hitter who can break up ball games. Cecil Travis, too smart a hitter to overswing, gives the club that long ball only occasionally and Buddy Lewis, the only other fellow on the team who can knock the ball out of reach with any consistency, will be in the Army before another season.

The Nats haven't owned a real climax hitter since Goose Goslin was in the sunset of his career. A few years ago, such as Al Simmons and Zeke Bonura gave the Nats that long ball with some frequency, but they were at the end of their big league tether otherwise and could not be retained despite their home runs.

George Archie has pretty thoroughly dispatched the notion that he is a big leaguer. He doesn't hit well enough. They have been curve-balling him to death. Archie, who batted .330 in the Pacific Coast League, and is now batting a mere .250 for the Nats, illustrated the difference in major and minor league league pitching.

The paradox is that Archie, a first baseman who willingly transferred to third base, has not been a failure as a third baseman defensively. He is no polished performer, but he has been adequate, and his throwing arm compares with the best in the league. He has the courage to knock down the hard hit balls with his teeth, if necessary. But the Nats are not the kind of a club that can carry a weak hitting third sacker. On a club with native power, he might do, but with the Nats he represents one more weakness.

Bloodworth Lacks—But Not Much

At second base, Jimmy Bloodworth isn't hitting as much as Archie, but Bloodworth does not represent an acute problem. Manager Bucky Harris is willing to struggle along with the Florida lad in deference to his fielding. Few second basemen have given their clubs as good protection at second as Bloodworth has given the Nats. Harris is willing to abide his frequent strikeouts because of Bloodworth's clever fielding. His relaying of balls from the outfield may be the best in the league. The club with enough hitting power, otherwise, to carry Bloodworth would have a pretty valuable ball player.

When Lewis moves into the army, the Nats will be about a .300 hitter in the outfield. Doc Cramer and George Case are adequate enough defensively, but the outfield is supposed to supply a club's batting power and they don't have it. Buck Harris is powerless to make any shifts. Sammy West, at the age of 38, represents little improvement, and JohnnyWeisl, his only other outfielder, is hitting less than .200.

Harris is working with skimpier reserves than any manager in either league. If Cecil Travis were hurt, there would be no man on the club who could take any experience to the shortstop job. Buddy Myer and Morris Aderholt, are the only reserve infielders on the squad, and they are both second basemen. Aderholt has been proving in his brief trial that he is no big leaguer, and Buddy Myer wanted to retire at the end of last season. He is with the club only because Clark Griffith prevailed him to play one more season.

First Base Worries Temporarily Over

When the Nats go South next Spring they will not have, for the first time in years, a first base problem. Mickey Vernon's development has been one of the bright chapters of the 1941 campaign. He's as fancy a fielder as any first baseman in the league, he has a better throwing arm than most, and is showing a definite ability to hit big league pitching. He hits with men on bases, incidentally.

Harris has been fortunate, too, with his young catchers. Jake Early is attracting notice throughout the league as a pretty good catcher, owner of a fine throwing arm, and is dangerous but is not a high-average hitter. He works hard, which is one of the reasons for his success. In Early and Evans, the Nats have catching protection for years to come.

And their pitching is pretty good. Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson are a potent nucleus for any pitching staff. Ken Chase's poor season must be thrown out of the reckoning because he has been troubled all year with a blistered finger. Alex Carrasquel has demonstrated that he can be a consistent winner. Their pitching is all right, but it's not good enough to carry a punchless outfield a weak-hitting third baseman and assorted other clubmates who hit the ball to all corners of the infield.

San Diego, Calif.

Dear Boss,

Don't tell a soul, but today I actually saw a cloud. There was no mistaking it. This wasn't any robust, manly-looking cloud, but rather a fluffy, feminine cloud. I pointed it out to one of the natives and he said, "That's no cloud. That's forest fire smoke."

Well, Boss, the Californians can have this weather. It's too monotonous for me. Every day is the same—a warm sun and a cool breeze. At night a guy can't lay around without a pajama top like we do in Washington. He has to get up and put on the blankets.

HAIGHT

How I yearn for that good, old Washington weather. I'd give anything for one of these 100 in the shade days. Just think, when I get back the summer will be over. What are you doing to me, anyway? Florida in the winter—California in the summer. I really crave a thunderstorm. Just think of a climate where you plan a picnic, make a golf date, want to go to a ball game and the weather is always perfect. No floods at the Peace Cross. Mothers can't say "Don't go out without your rubbers," and no umbrella man.

With perpetual good weather, what do you think the people talk about here? They talk about the weather.

I saw Al Schacht, the baseball clown who used to do his stuff with Nick Altrock at Griffith Stadium, go through his routine last night at the local ball park. He still had a few acts that I saw at home and some new ones.

This morning I met a different Schacht in the hotel lobby. He was blessing his lucky stars that he was still alive. After he left the park he had headed North for other engagements. A marine on a motorcycle is alleged to have been on the wrong side of the road and crashed into Schacht's car. The marine was killed but Schacht escaped injury. The one-time Washington pitcher was far from a clown as he walked the floor. "Seemed like a bad dream to me," said Schacht.

I asked Schacht if he had any insurance. He replied, "I have every kind of insurance. Why, I'm even insured against hurting anybody when I put on my show at the ball park. I had one experience and I've been protected over since. I accidentally threw a ball in the stands once and was sued by a little boy who said the ball broke his nose. Yes, I've got insurance."

It just wasn't the right time to come through with any wisecracks, but I couldn't help thinking that Schacht should never worry about breaking anybody's nose with a thrown baseball. Why every batter that faced him in the American League would testify that he never pitched a ball fast enough to break a cobweb.

Well, Boss, I'm no nearer being

Nats Bow, 6-3, Then Tie Browns, 3-3

Darkness Halts 2d Game at 3-3

St. Louis Deadlocks Nightcap in Ninth; Homers Decisive In Opening Clash

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

St. Louis, Aug. 25.—Small as their ambition was—to get an even break with the Browns in a double-header—the Nats failed in that effort today when they were forced to be content with a 3-3 ten-inning tie after losing the first game, 6 to 3.

Tall Sidney Hudson appeared on the brink of applying the brakes to the Nats' four-game losing streak when he entered the ninth inning of the second game with a 3-2 lead, but Chet Laabs sent the game into extra-innings with a single through Hudson's legs after two were out in the ninth. Darkness halted the game after a scoreless tenth.

The first game was something of a breeze for the Browns after they collected a 4-1 lead off Arnold Anderson in the first two innings. Young Bob Harris held the Nats in check, with some ninth-inning assistance from Archie McKain.

Hitting Continues Weak

TheNats were no great help to Hudson in that second game. Of their three runs, they only batted one acros the plate. They managed to tie the score in the seventh inning after batting Dennis Galehouse out of the box, because Relief Pitcher McKain, making his second appearance of the day, walked one run across. In fact, the Nats took the lead in that inning when Jack Kramer, relieving McKain, walked a second run across the plate. The Nats weren't slugging 'em across.

In the ninth, the Nats' old pal, Rick Ferrell, inspired the tying run for the Browns when he led off with a double down the left-field line. Auker, running for Ferrell, moved to third on Pinch Hitter Don Heffner's infield out. Lucadello singled off Bloodworth's glove, but Auker held third and when Clift popped up for the second out Hudson needed to dispose only of Laabs.

The Browns almost won the game in the next moment. Lucadello, who had sprinted to third on Laabs' blow, tried to score when Cramer's throw got away from Third Baseman Archie, but Archie retrieved the ball and threw Lucadello out on a close play at the plate.

The Nats were wasting their hits horribly in that second game. They banged Galehouse for eight hits in the first five innings, but came up with only one run. That one scored in the htird inning on consecutive singles by Case, Cramer and Lewis.

Thereafter they sort of abandoned Hudson, who held the Browns to three hits until the sixth when Laabs singled and Cullenbine punched a homerun atop the right-

Smith Checks Yanks, Chisox Triumph, 9-1

By International News Service

Chicago, Aug. 25.—The second place Chicago White Sox trimmed New York's American League leadership a full notch down to 16 games today by thrashing the Yankees, 9 to 1.

Edgar Smith gave the Yanks nine hits, but kept them scattered. It was his thirteenth victory of the season. The Sox knocked Marius Russo off the mound and went on to collect a dozen safeties.

Chicago's wo-run assault in the second inning proved sufficient to win the game. Wright singled, scored on Apling's triple and Appling came home on Solters' single. Chicago added a trio of runs in the sixth and routed Russo with a four-run attack in the seventh. New York's lone tally was made in the third inning.

Grid Dodgers Buy Mortell From Eagles

Princeton, N. J., Aug. 25 (AP).—The Brooklyn Football Dodgers today announced the purchase of Emmett Mortell, former Wisconsin star and halfback with the Philadelphia Eagles.

The 185-pound Mortell was the property of Bert Bell and Art Rooney, owners of the Pittsburgh club, although he played last year with the Eagles, then owned by Bell.

Sadness Envelops the Gowanus As Rain Halts Dodgers, Cards

5000 Fans, Standing in Line Since 11 o'Clock Disappointed; Double-Header Slated Today

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug 25—The familiar refrain "rain today—two games tomorrow" interrupted the bitter pennant fight of the Brooklyn Dodgers and St. Louis Cardinals today.

It was just one of those unforseen incidents which pop up in the heat of a fierce struggle and then later is pointed to as one of the factors which helped one team or the other to squeeze into the championship.

It cost the Brooklyn Dodgers some money—how much is hard to guess. At 11 o'clock this morning, four hours before game time, there were 5000 fans in a big, uneven line around three sides of Ebbets Field, jostling and joshing in the rain. They stayed there in spite of the elements until Larry MacPhail, President of the Dodgers, finally called off the game. And even at 3 o'clock, ordinarily game time, several hundred still were huddled in the entrances underneath the stands.

This seemed to indicate that the double-header tomorrow, second between the clubs in three days, would be a sellout for the 34,000-capacity ball park, but it might have been even for a single game.

Manager Leo Durocher of the Dodgers named Curt Davis, a former Cardinal, and the veteran Fred Fitzsimmons to take the mound for the final games. Davis has won nine games, including four shutouts, and lost six. Fitzsimmons, the fat knuckle-ball specialist, usually used in spot assignments against Pittsburgh and Philadelphia, has won five times this year without a defeat. One of his triumphs was a great relief performance against the Cardinals on July 31.

Hertz Quits Pro League; Fires Coach

By the United Press

New York, Aug. 25.—Douglas Hertz, backer of the New York Yankees football team, announced tonight that he had withdrawn his team from the American League and at the same time fired Jack McBride as coach.

Hertz issued a statement apparently in answer to League President W. D. Griffiths' announcement August 2 that Hertz had been suspended from the circuit.

The Yankees' owner said that he remained convinced that there was room for two leagues in professional football but that the present setup of the American League did not warrant much faith in its future.

Hertz declared that most of the other cities in the league had failed to live up to their promises of last winter to raise real backing to build strong teams. Outside of his own Yankees, he said, only two clubs at most—Milwaukee and Columbus—appeared financially able to go through with their schedules.

In reference to the McBride discharge he pointed out that McBride and Griffiths were "responsible for the misleading stories that have appeared regarding my reasons for withdrawing the Yankees from the league."

Hertz added that the Yankees will not be disbanded but will play a full season of exhibition games as an independent team, with no league affiliations.

Feller Beaten By Wagner of Bosox, 1 to 0

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, Aug. 25.—Boston's Red Sox moved into third place tonight by beating the Indians, 1 to 0, on Charley Wagner's four-hit pitching. Bob Feller also allowed four blows in losing his eleventh game against 21 victories. Two walks and Frankie Pytlak's double gave Boston its run in the seventh.

The decision was the eighth of the season against five setbacks for Wagner. Wagner and Feller both fanned four and walked four.

Cleveland threatened in the fourth as Jeff Heath led off with a double and advanced on a sacrifice. However, he was doubled at the plate on Ken Keltner's short popper to Lamar Newsome. Wagner issued two passes in the seventh, but tightened to get Beau Bell and Pinch Hitter Larry Rosenthal.

Lady Fan, Socked By Foul Ball, Gets $25 Defense Bond

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Aug. 25.—Mrs. Bradley Betterton of Chattanooga was in the party of Chattanooga baseball owner Joe Engel yesterday while showman Joe was passing $100 bills to Pitcher Buck Marrow for each scoreless inning he pitched against Atlanta.

John Burke Scores a 68; 3 Match Par

Otto Greiner's 72 Tied by Ted Bishop, Ellsworth Vines; Bogart Shoots 83

By the Associated Press

Omaha, Aug. 25.—A pair of overlooked long shots whose past performances have stopped just short of gaining them real national recognition took full charge today in the first 18-hole qualifying round of the United States Golf Association's forty-fifth amateur championship.

Stewart M. (Skip) Alexander, a golfer of considerable repute in his native North Carolina, set a competitive course record for the revamped Omaha Field Club with a 5-under-par 67 that paced the 145 contenders for the title won last year by Dick Chapman. On his heels with a 68 came red-headed Johnny Burke, now playing out of Chicago after an Eastern career that included victory in the 1938 intercollegiates.

Alexander is 23, Burke 24. Both are fine iron players and it was iron play that sent them ahead of such stars as Chapman, Bud Ward, Ray Billows, the Field Club's own Johnny Goodman and Texas Harry Todd by margins from five to nine strokes.

Greiner Has 72

In fact even the next three places went to players who hadn't been rated too highly in the advance calculations.

Otto Greiner, fresh out of the University of Baltimore; Ellsworth Vines, the lanky Californian who has switched from championship tennis to golf, and Ted Bishop, of Boston, New England champion, were deadlocked at 72, even par.

Ralph Bogart, the 21-year-old city champion from Washington, D. C., was in trouble all the way and finished with a 40-43, 83, 11 over par. From the way the scores ran today Bogart will need a par round tomorrow to make the match play grade.

Otto Greiner's 72 was by far the best of the Middle Atlantic section's delegation. Walter Cushman, Charlottesville, had 41-43, 84, including 42 putts, and Eddie Johnston, Baltimore, 41-45, 86.

Benno Janssen, the Charlottesville youngster who qualified in Pittsburgh, was way out with 41-44, 85, while John Donohue, the Georgetown U. student from Omaha, posted a 38-43, 81 ,and Karl F. Kellerman, a former District resident, had 38-42, 78.

Par—
Out	445	534	434	—36
In	443	444	454	—36—72
Bogart—
Out	454	546	435	—43
In	555	554	484	—43—83

Ward was low scorer among the dope sheet "hot shots" with a 73, which bracketed him with Goodman and Glenn Oatman, who used to coach the University of Kansas golf team when he still was a student there. At 74 came Chapman and one of his playing partners, Brazilian Mario Gonzales; Bob Cochran, of St. Louis, Edwin McClure, of Shreveport, La., and Rodney Bliss, another Omaha hopeful.

Ward, Goodman Tie

Ward, who won the title in 1939, and Goodman, winner in Portland, Oreg., in 1937, were low among the former champions in the field, followed by Chapman, Johnny Fischer, Cincinnati, who won in 1936 and had 78 today and Chick Evans, the veteran Chicagoan who won in 1916 and 1920, but practically lost all

With the tournament being played over the nine-hole Indian Spring course September 4, pro officials were forced to limit the field to 75 players and more than 50 have already notified Host Pro Mel Shorey of their intention to compete.

Open Purse Is Boosted

Shorey announced yesterday that club members had boosted the purse by an additional $75, which makes a total of $200 to be added to the entry fees. With a full entry list at $5 per man assured the total purse will be near the $600 mark, of which some $150 will go back into amateur prizes.

Houghton received a wire yesterday from Richmond which included the entries of Darrell Napier, Petersburg pro; John O'Donnell, the former Maryland Open champion from the C. C. of Virginia, and Lawrence Gary, Hermitage Club, Richmond pro. Bobby Cruickshank wired his entry on Sunday.

Arthur Thorn, the Lancaster, Pa., mentor has entered, and Bruce Coltart, Atlantic City, is expected. The Baltimore pros have entered in a body, in addition to Rut Coffey, Hagerstown, and Levi Yoder, Annapolis.

Entries Close Tuesday

Entries will close Tuesday, September 2 at Indian Spring and post entries will not be accepted. Play will start at 8 a. m. to accommodate the field at 36 holes, and will be in threesomes.

Houghton and Shorey visited the sporting goods firms yesterday and purchased an array of attractive amateur prizes. They also worked on plans for the dinner that night at 7:30 o'clock.

The early response on the Washington Open leaves Wiffy Cox, the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. president, with a perfect batting average on his plan to hold an open championship in Baltimore, Washington and Richmond, in addition to the sectional championship. The Baltimore Open, honoring Jimmy Roche, drew nearly 100 entries and was one of the most successful affairs ever held in the city.

Pros Prep for Hershey

Meanwhile, several of the city's tournament playing professionals spent part of yesterday on the practice tee in preparation for the $5000 Hershey Open Championship, which starts Thursday in the Pennsylvania town. Houghton Al Tredor, Bob Barnett, Cliff Spencer, Lewis Worsham, jr., Fred Bolton and possibly Earle Skinker, among the amateurs, will leave here tomorrow morning for a practice round, while Leo Walper is expected to fly back from Omaha, where he is working with Dick Chapman in the National Amateur.

The only other affair before the Washington Open will be the lady-pro event next Tuesday at Congressional, in which the pros will each have three women partners.

Virginia Guilfoil Is Favored in Golf

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Aug. 25 (AP).—The Mason-Dixon's women's golf tournament starts tomorrow with Virginia Guilfoil, New York State women's champion, favored to capture her third Mason-Dixon crown.

With the championship flight reduced from 32 to 16, the official tourney was postponed one day. A mixed foursome event planned as an informal tune-up was rained out today.

Starting two rounds of qualifying play tomorrow with Miss Guilfoil, winner in 1937 and 1939, will be 80 to 90 shotmakers from West Virginia, Virginia, District of Columbia, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Connecticut, North Carolina and Tennessee. Mary Morrison, 1940 winner, will not defend her crown.

New Purple Coach and His Star Prospect

Hudson had to go out and put a run in motion for himself in the seventh, which he did by beating out a hit to Berardino with none out. He moved to third on Case's single to left, and Galehouse was lifted. McKain's first act was to hit Cramer on the arm, filling the bases. With none out, the best the Nats could get was two runs out of the inning and they were gifts. Lewis drew a walk, forcing Hudson home, but Travis and Vernon poped up to Clift. Kramer was sent into pitch against Archie and forced home the run that put the Nats in a 3-2 lead.

Hudson, obviously weakening, gave up three hits to the Browns in the eighth, but they failed to score. George Case saved the game at that point when his throw from left field caught Judnich who tried to score from second on Grace's single to left.

But in the ninth the Browns came up with the tying run, and at the end of the tenth, the umpires said it was too dark to continue, which it was. The two teams will play the game off tomorrow, which was to be an open date.

Brown Runs Cheap

In that first game, in which he was the losing pitcher, Anderson, was more sinned against than otherwise. The Browns found themselves in possession of a 4-1 lead at the end of two innings, but three of those runs came cheaply.

There was nothing cheap about their first run. That one was Chet Laabs' homer into the leftfield seats with two out in the first inning. With Judnich at bat next, Al Evans staggered under a pop fly that would have retired him, and then dropped it for an error. In gratitude, Judnich banged the next pitch onto the rightfield roof for a homerun.

The Browns' came up with two more in the second inning under strange circumstances. Grace lifted a high fly in Travis' direction and the wind caried it out of the shortstop's reach for a single. On the next pitch Berardino also popped a ball over the infield, and when the high wind was through playing its low tricks, the ball fell behind Bloodworth for a single. The runners moved up a base on Swift's infield out, and Grace scored from third when a pitch got away from Evans. Anderson covered the plate as Evans retrieved the ball, but he got a wild thrown from the catcher on the play. Berardino went to third and scored a bit later on Harris' long fly.

Solid Blows Count

Bob Harris meanwhile was doing a job on the Nats. Travis tripled in the second and scored on Archie's single to right, and in the fourth they picked up another run when Travis walked and eventually scored on another single to center by Archie. But thereafter, until the ninth the Nats were scoreless. They had the bases filled in the sixth with two out, but Pinch Hitter Buddy Myer popped up. In the ninth, they knocked Harris out of the box with three straight hits before anybody was out, but Archie McKain came in and deflated 'em. They got only one run out of the inning when Cramer, Lewis and Travis failed to get the ball out of the infield.

MacPhail Talks Warily of Series

New York, Aug. 25.—If the Dodgers win the pennant, and if Brooklyn fans insist that the Dodgers' home games be moved out of Ebbets Field, said World Series games won't be moved to the Yankee Stadium. They'll be moved to the Polo Grounds, Larry MacPhail said today.

CONSIDINE

"But let's not talk about where the World Series is going to be played," the blue-eyed, florid-faced president of the Dodgers protested. "We've still got the pennant to win. If I start talking World Series we'll get our ears knocked off. It never fails.

"But just in case we do win . . ." Larry reconsidered, unable to resist that beatific prospect, "my own feeling is that our games should be played in Brooklyn. The club belongs here. The people here support it. They made it. They're entitled to it. But if they want it moved to a bigger park, so that more of them can see it, who am I to object? But, listen, if there's any moving to be done, you won't find us moving to an American League park. We'll move to the Polo Grounds and keep it in our league."

As a matter of fact, MacPhail is a little contemptuous of the Yankee Stadium, not because it is the property of an American League team, but because it is "obsolete."

"I don't think you're going to see anything like that built again," he said. "It's an unfortunate size. It's too big for all but a few games a year, and it's going to be huge, you really ought to be huge. New York If you're going to be huge, you really ought to be huge. New York ought to have a stadium seating between 150,000 and 200,000 people. If we had such a place and put one of the city's ball clubs in it to keep the place going through the season, we could fill it if the club got into the World Series, or the place scheduled a big football game, a heavyweight title fight or so on.

Vision of 200,000 Baseball Crowd

"If the Army-Navy game can draw 102,000 in that rattle-trap stadium in Philadelphia, with no hotel accomodations, it would draw 200,000 in New York. Matter of fact, the World Series, when its played in New York, would draw a couple of hundred thousand persons, if there were "a place to play it and the price were right."

We asked him what he meant by a right price.

"The World Series tickets ought to be priced the same as regular season tickets," MacPhail said. "It's ridiculous to charge five-fifty to see a ball game. But it has to be done, in the parks we play in. It's just one of those things. The old story of supply and demand.

"I don't know what we'll do if we win. We sold more than 20,000 tickets six weeks in advance for Sunday's double-header between Brooklyn and the Cards. What the honk will happen if we get in the series?"

MacPhail indicates that future builders of ball parks or stadiums will have to make the choice between the very modest and the supercolossal. "I'm just as well pleased with Ebbets Field," he added. "I could have sold 100,000 tickets in advance for the Sunday doubleheader between the Dodgers and Cards. Two hundred thousand persons would have come to that double-header if they had been assured of being able to buy a ticket before leaving their homes. As it was, the cops turned at least 35,000 people away from the park after we locked the gates.

You Lose One Time—Win Another

"Sure I would've liked to have that dough in the till. But, by and large, I'm pleased with Ebbets Field. We fill most of its seats through nearly 60 home games a year. As for the others—opening day, the seven night games, the holidays and the good Sundays—we get stuck. But they amount to only about 20 games, and any other place in New York would be inadequate on those dates, so what's the difference? Besides, we don't have to worry about the cost of thousands of empty seats through most of the year."

After a while MacPhail got tired of the topic, talked about ball players for a while, said that he thought Howard Pollet was a much better pitcher than Ernie White, because he had a good fast ball, and retreated to the other side of the bar. But the topic of supply and demand, and big stadiums vs. Ebbets Fields haunted him.

"What's more," he said suddenly, in the midst of some other topic, "I wiped out $2000 worth of business by putting up that green screen in center field to help the vision of the batters. I might've told the knot hole gang that I was sorry, but I wanted to sell the seats I had promised them early in the year. I could have gotten $15,000 for those seats I gave away. But I didn't and don't get me wrong. Don't think I didn't want the fifteen . . ."

Fireman Ten Gives Police Another Chance

But the story of the day was the fine joint performance of Alexander, current North-South champion, and Burke.

Alexander started with a birdie on the first hole and never slacked off on the pressure. What's more, only one of his birdie putts was more than 10 feet, and that was a 20-footer on the third. For the rest his iron shots put him within 4 feet of the flag on the first, less tha a foot on the fourth, 5 feet for a deuce on the eighth, 10 feet on the thirteenth and 8 feet on the fifteenth.

Saves Big Stroke

Burke had finished hours ahead of him and when Skip overshot the green on the eighteenth it appeared he would get no better than a tie for the lead. But he chipped back 3 feet from the hole and sank the putt for his one-shot margin.

Burke began less sensationally. Sizeable putts giving him two birdies going out for a 34 to Alexander's 32. On the inside he dropped in a 30-footer for a deuce on the 160-yard twelfth, sank one from five feet after a grand second shot out of the rough on No. 16 and got one of the day's only two birdies on the 622-yard seventeenth, where he rolled in a 25-foot putt for his four.

Each man went over par once the whole way round. Alexander, on the tenth hole, where he caught the rough with drive and second shot and Burke on the fourteenth, a tough 450-yard par four, where he missed an iron shot.

Ward Birdies

Ward played 10 successive holes in par, sank a 12-foot putt at No. 11 for his lone birdie, then lost strokes on the fifteenth and seventeenth when his tee shots got him into trouble. Goodman, who took 3 putts on the first hole, came back with birdies on the third and eighth to hit the turn in 34, one under par. But coming back he three-putted once, left himself short once and fired wide of the eighteenth green for a 38 and his 73.

Chapman also was out in 35, with a deuce on the 150-yard eighth where his tee shot stopped a foot from the cup. Gonzales might have had a 72 but for a slice on his second shot at the fourth hole, which dog-legs to the right. Gonzales tried to out the corner but was out of bounds.

Todd and Gus Morleand, the 30-year-old former Walker Cupper from Peoria, both looked to be on the verge of oblivion after nine holes, Todd with a 42 and Moreland a 41, but each came back in a two-under-par 34 to stay in the thick of the race.

10 Have 75

In the middle and upper 70's were Ray Billows, twice a finalist; Art Doering, of Chicago; Moreland and seven others at 75; Todd, Private Charley Yates, of Atlanta; Pat Abbott, of Los Angeles, and 18 others at 76; Frank Stranahan, 18-year-old trans-Mississippi champion, 77; Duff McCullough, of Philadelphia, runner-up to Chapman in 1940, 78, and Wilford Wehrle, of Chicago, 1940 semifinalist, at 80.

With 69 players with scores of 78 or better, it appeared 155 or 156 would be the limit for the low 64 who go into match play after tomorrow's round.

Two Jockey Teams Bowl At Rosslyn

Two quintets of famous jockeys will try their skill at duckpinning tomorrow night at Rosslyn Bowling Center, according to Galt Davis, owner of the drives. Davis promises that such well-known jockeys as Sammy Palumbo, king of the half milers; Willy Kelly, Joe Hernandez, Charlie Walters, Carlton Kirk, "Pappy" Witmer and Danny Scocca will be present.

Davis promises a fast track and a packed grandstand for the event. Spectators are invited to view the match which starts at 8 o'clock.

Eddie Goldberg's brand-new girls' team, which will be entered in the Ladies' District League this season, had its first warm-up match last night against Rosslyn and lost by the narrow margin of 18 sticks, the final score being 1621 to 1603. But for Lucy Rose's sizzling 148 game, which included a tenth-box strike on which she counted ten, the Clarendon girls would have made the grade.

Southpaw Dot Gude starred for Clarendon wih 132—348, with Kitty Smith close with her 126—340. Anna Daut was next with 323 and Helen DeBinder contributed 314. Mrs. Rose was the star of the evening as she totaled 381 for her set. Evelyn Naylor was next with 337 and Gladys Lynn had 319.

Pacific Grid Head Relents On Penalties

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Aug. 25.—High Commissioner Edwin N. Atherton, whose crackdown last May affected the athletic futures of 22 students at their Pacific Coast conference schools, today vindicated one of the purgees and authorized five more to transfer to other schools without penalty.

Fred Small, of Mead, Wash., one of four 1940 freshman athletes ruled ineligible for further competition at Washington State College, was reinstated to full privileges at his alma mater. Commissioner Atherton said presentation of new facts convinced him Small had not violated conference rules.

Five athletes described as "victims but not active parties to violations of the rules" were granted permission to transfer to other member schools without loss of a year's competition, as is usually the case. Atherton said the five had lost their eligibility due to alumni and fraternity activities but had made no effort to "peddle" their services.

They are Keith Carr, of Bellingham, and Don rentice and Robert Simpson, both of Spokane, all Washington State College registrants, and William Gissberg and Bart Gianelli, of the University of Oregon, both from Everett, Wash. The commissioner said he had not been advised to which schools they intend to transfer.

One other transfer petition under similar conditions already has been granted. Robert Koch, of Portland, one of eight 1940 Stanford freshmen declared ineligible for future competition there, received permission to switch to the University of Oregon. He ranks as an outstanding football backfield prospect.

Atherton also disclosed the conference, by a mail vote, had adopted a rule permitting any registered student to compete on teams against any United States military service teams.

Post Grid School Has a 'Guest' for the Day

Phil Fox Lectures Post Football School as Second Week Begins

Attendance Increases; Men Enthused Over Friday's Scheduled Game

The Washington Post's first football school attendance took a gratifying leap upward yesterday as the second and last week of classes began at Eastern High stadium.

Following the policy of having numerous "guest" coaches in addition to its regular staff, the school yesterday was attended by Phil Fox, former Central High star, who will coach Eastern gridmen this fall. Phil talked at length on the condition young athletes should try to attain, then demonstrated the various systems of play used all over the country. With a session at "Fritz" Crisler's coaching school at West Virginia Univeristy this summer backing up his own active career, Fox's lecture lacked nothing in authority.

He particularly stressed scholastic standing, using as examples the many schoolboy stars who have been unable to continue their careers in college because of poor grades.

Students, to a man, expressed enthusiasm over the regulation "touch" game to be held Friday, at the school's last session. Players will be divided into two groups, one headed by Coach Sam Fox and the other by Coach Jim O'Leary, and a full-time game staged. Blocking and all other aspects of the real thing will be undergone, leaving out only tackling.

Today The Post school will have as its "guest" Hardy Pearce, head of the public school physical education department. A former grid great at Hardin-Simmons College and George Washington University, and coach at Central High, Pearce will appear on a program which will stress downfield blocking.

Gartrell and Burger Even Duckpin Series

Bill Gartrell and Johnnie Burger, Takoma Recreation, earned sweet revenge last night when they soundly trounced Al Wright and Paul James, Arlington Bowling Center, byt the score of 1313 to 1172 in a doubles match. The Arlington team won the first match a week ago. Johnnie Burger was the star of the match with a single of 156 which he turned into a 698 set, Gartrell contributing 615 to the total. Wright was high for the Arlington team with a 142 game.

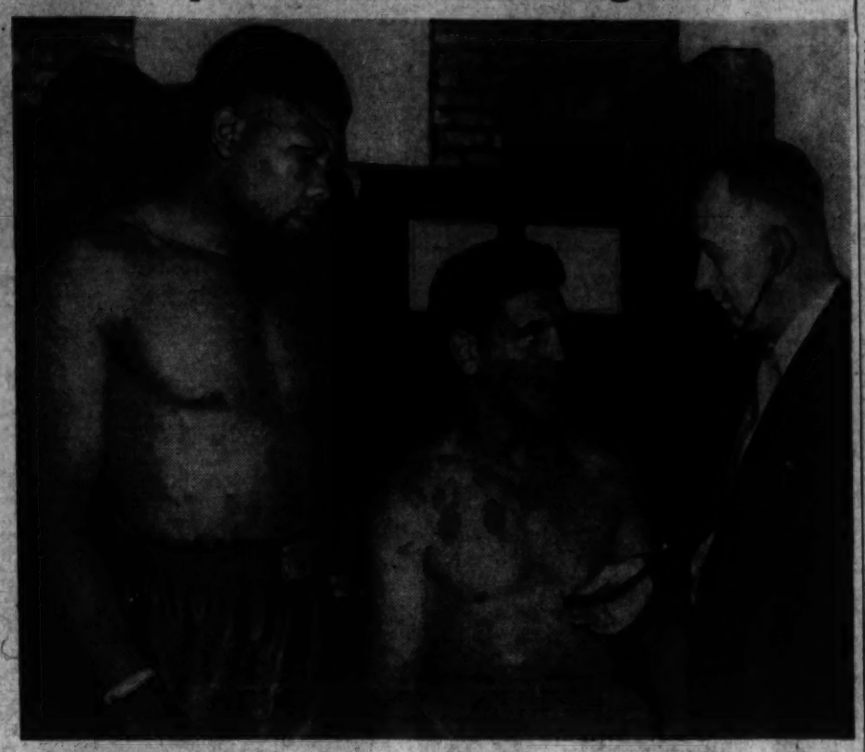
Comiskey Here Today, Completes Roundup for 67-Round Fight Show



Bill Poland, Jack Kearns' new heavyweight protege (center) and Eddie Blunt, colored ace, are pictured being examined by Dr. William F. Greaney, District Boxing Commission physician, at Turner's Arena yesterday as they wound up training for tomorrow night's 25-round match at Griffith Stadium. The doc says both fighters are in fine shape

Odds Quotations Favor Poland, 8-5, in Feature; Workouts Again Slated at Arena; Sales Good

Pat Comiskey, promising young heavyweight who is scheduled to meet Claudio Villar in a ten-rounder, was the only principal not on the scene yesterday as last-minute details of the 67-round 'Carnival of Heavyweight' at Griffith Stadium tomorrow night were ironed out.

Comiskey was expected to report late last night or early this morning and take his final workout at Turner's Arena this afternoon. He will probably be joined by Villar and Lee Savold, the husky who will face Buddy Scott tomorrow night.

Meanwhile Bill Poland, Jewish protege of Jack Kearns, and Eddie Blunt, principals in the 25-round marathon which will highlight the card, will take it easy today. They concluded training yesterday with light workouts at the Arena.

With many Baltimoreans backing Poland, pre-fight odds yesterday were quoted at 8-5 favoring the Jewish slugger. Poland's recent knockout of Harry Bobo in the Oriole City is credited with his favoritism there.

Not only were boxing fans making substantial inroads on choice seats yesterday, but they also were busily claiming some 10,000 general admission tickets placed on sale at Turner's yesterday.

The approximate weights are: Blunt, 216, and Poland, 196; Pat Comiskey, 200, and Claudio Villar, 205; Buddy Scott, 186, and Lee Savold, 184; Ben Morez, 184, and Jabbo Kenner, 210; Earl Lohman, 215, and Otis Harris, 195.

Phil Furr, the District welterweight champion, is to lay his title on the line against Al Franklin, popular, local Negro warrior, in a 12-round semifinal which will prove the first mixed bout ever to involve a District championship since boxing's legalization here. They are, incidentally, the only fighters on the show below the heavyweight scale.

A public weighing-in of Blunt and Poland is scheduled at Turner's Arena tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock and the ceremonies will be broadcast over Station WINX. Weighing in of the preliminary principals will take place at the Boxing Commission at 2 o'clock.

The supporting card in its entirety follows: Al Franklin vs. Phil Furr, 12 rounds; Pat Comiskey vs. Claudio Villar, 10 rounds; Buddy Scott vs. Lee Savold, 10 rounds; Ben Morez vs. Jabbo Kenner, 6 rounds, and Earl Lohman vs. Otis Harris, 4 rounds.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Whirlaway, Warren Wright's bushy tailed [illegible] cannonball of the turf, is on the trail of Seabiscuit's record as the leading money winner in American racing history.

The Calumet colt vaulted into sixth place among equine earners Saturday as he added the $44,975 first place money in Washington Park's American Derby to his bankroll. That brought his total for less than two years of campaigning to $320,611, compared to Seabiscuit's record of $437,730. The Biscuit won his last $100,000 as a 6-year-old.

Light-Heavies Clear Up Title Tangle Tonight

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 25.—The light heavyweight championship picture, in somewhat of a muddle ever since Billy Conn relinquished the crown for a shot at Joe Louis, will be cleared up tomorrow night when Gus Lesnevich of Cliffside, N. J., tangles with Tami Mauriello of New York at Madison Square Garden.

Lesnevich already has some claim to the title since he defeated Anton Christoforidis at the Garden last May to gain recognition of the National Boxing Association as the 175-pound king. Tomorrow night's bout has the sanction of not only the N. B. A. but also the New York State Athletic Commission.

Whatever the outcome, some 12,000 fans are expected to see a real slug fest. Mauriello has put 22 of his opponents to sleep in winning 32 of his 33 fights, most of them as a middleweight. The only fight the Bronx boy has lost was a close decision to Billy Soose, the middleweight king. This is somewhat better than the knockout record of Lesnevich, who has 16 to his credit in 63 fights during his seven-year professional career.

Lesnevich has been around considerably longer than Mauriello and has been over the 15-round route of tener (this is Tabi's first at that distance,) but the Bronx boy has been much more active this year. He has been to the post nine times since January 1, winning his last eight by kayos. Lesevich has fought only twice, the last time in May against Christoforidis.

Blackwell Is Beaten By Charley Burley

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25 (AP).—Charley Burley, Pittsburgh Negro who has beaten both Fritzie Zivic and Billy Soose, pounded out a decision in eight rounds tonight over another tough Negro boxer from Homestead, Pa., Otto Blackwell. Burley weighed 153 pounds, eight more than his opponent.

Dodgers Granted Permission to Take Phelps Off List

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, Aug. 25.—The Brooklyn Dodgers announced tonight that Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis had given them permission to remove the name of Catcher Gordon (Babe) Phelps from their active list.

In making the announcement Secretary John McDoDnald of the Dodgers said Landis had not yet placed Phelps on baseball's ineligible list, equivalent to indefinite suspension, but had telegraphed Phelps for particulars in his case.

Phelps complained of illness and refused to accompany the Dodgers West on June 12. He was suspended by President Larry MacPhail, but under baseball law a club suspension may last only ten days and he was reinstated at the end of that period.

Landis held a hearing on the case in Chicago August 1 and at that time Phelps said he intended to apply for voluntary retirement, but never made the application.

The decision reduced Brooklyn's player roster to 24 and made it possible for them to add Augie Galan, former Chicago outfielder, without giving up any of their present players.

William and Mary Names 2 Coaches

By the Associated Press

Richmond, Va., Aug. 25.—Appointments of Dwight Stuessy as varsity end coach and Dick Gallagher as head freshman coach were announced tonight by Carl Voyles, athletic director of William and Mary.

The Indian eleven had no full-time end coach last season. Assisting Gallagher with the freshmen will be Eric Tipton, of Petersburg, former Duke All-American.

Happy Lark Wins at Marlboro; Jockey Martinez Injured

Rider Sent to Emergency Hospital Here

Jockey Suffers Fractured Back, Head Injuries in Spill on Arboreal

By Clocker Mike

Marlboro, Md., Aug. 25. — Mrs. Veader Leonard's Happy Lark looked like something good to eat to the 5000 fans present today and she ran in just that fashion to take the top money in the Chesapeake Beach Purse, fifth and feature event on the washday card, which was marred by a near-serious accident in the second race. Jockey A. F. Martinez, forcing the early pace aboard Arboreal, was injured when his mount fell passing the grandstand and rolled over on him. After an examination at the track hospital, Martinez was removed to Emergency Hospital in Washington, where it was reported he had suffered a head injury and a fractured vertebrae.

Happy Lark, 4-year-old son of Happy Time, was in front coming by the stand the first time and he was never headed throughout the 5½ furlongs. G. G. Waugh jr.'s Last Bet followed him across the line, with Glitter Girl in the show hole. With Wayne Weber, contract rider for the Leonard Stable, wide-awake at the gate, Happy Lark was sent out in the first flight and had soon shown in front with Last Bet in close pursuit. However, going around the turn Weber turned on the steam and the 4-year-old gelding sprinted into a two-length lead. Many in the crowd figured he had enough when Last Bet began to close the gap entering the stretch, but once again Weber let out a notch and the result was not in doubt from there in. Glitter Girl always held a contending position, while being hard ridden, but she was not good enough to threaten the top two.

Although winning in easy fashion, Happy Lark hung up the best time of the meeting for the distance when he completed the course in 1:08. Backed down to 3 to 5 in the mutuels, Happy Lark returned only $3.20 to his many backers.

—At The Post

Dear Al:

There is no doubt about Royal Business being the "queen of the half-milers," but as we have said many times before, she always seems to have the best of the racing luck. In Saturday's race, Palumbo was lucky enough to find a hole and send her between horses, while Root, on J. Hal, was forced to take the overland route. Royal Business, as you all know by now, took the decision by a nose. If the cases had been reversed there is no doubt that J. Hal would have been the winner. While saying that she had plenty of luck, don't overlook Palumbo's excellent ride. With the meeting half over, it is a very close race for the riding honors. The standing, up to and including Saturday, was Root 5; Scocca 4. Calvin L. Bowling, agent for Jockey Eddie Delpino, will join Uncle Sam's fighting forces Wednesday. Bowling is a well known figure around the track and halls from Baltimore. R. L. Meighen purchased Princess Lady at private terms from S. B. Berry and turned her over to J. E. (Doc) Littlefield to train. J. Bowes Bond reports that his father, M. Nelson Bond, has rallied the past few days and is much improved. The sooner he gets out and about the better we will all like it. There have been two horses destroyed thus far in the meeting. Knollwood Stables' Good Grass was cut down while racing in the lead and was destroyed, while Mrs. P. Fringe's Blind Brook broke a leg when entering the stretch. Carlyle Johnson, who has worked on the circuit for the Daily Racing Form, departed for Wheeling Downs. Tommy Daly will take over the calling job for the Form. The old reliable, Eddie McCann, is still on the job. Timonium, which opens its ten-day meeting Monday, hopes to reach a betting mark of $350,000 on Labor Day. Mookie went to Atlantic City over the weekend and brought the boys in the box a couple of pounds of salt water taffy. We did pretty good with it, too. They tried to get Tiger Finkelstein to go but he was afraid the water would be wet. They tell me it took some of the crowd so long to get out of the track Saturday night that they began pitching tents to spend the weekend.—Clocker Mike.

First race—ZAC PAM was a beaten favorite earlier in the meeting but I believe it will be a different story today. ACE OF TRUMPS would furnish the contention if able to break in. SARANITE'S last was not true.

Second race—BEACON QUEEN was third to fair horses last out and that effort points her out. FRANK H. has been rested and if as fit as works indicate he will be a tough horse. PRAETOR will like this distance.

Third race—ROYAL MOWLEE had as much bad luck as a horse can have in that last appearance. Figures to gallop in a field like this. AUBALEY finished third last out after being last at the head of the stretch. LITTLE SUZANNE has plenty of early foot.

Fourth race—STADIUM'S race was not as good as some others in this race but was a much easier winner. REMOLEE has always been a tough horse over this track but may find the top one too speedy. CHANCER was a clever winner last out.

Fifth race—DASHING DOE set the pace in the handicap won by Royal Business and off that effort appears the likely winner. BULLET B. is a sharp horse but appears to be placed too high. HIBLAZE beat Eltonhead and others last out.

Sixth race—I'm coming up with a brand new one here and taking DOMINAL to reach the wire in front. ROUGH GOING lost stirrups last out and should show a better race today. EGYPTA is at top form.

Seventh race—MINSTON was such a clever winner here last week that I'm forced to hop back on the wagon. SCORIA had a rough trip last out and should be right there. ALMAC must be given a chance.

Eighth race—JOAN ASBESTOS ran the fastest mile and a sixteenth of the meeting when winning by 12 in 1:55 3-5. Jockey Garrett will again be in the saddle and there should be no mistake made. WINTONA showed a good race last out and is dangerous. VESTALE was knocked about last out.

Best bet—JOAN ASBESTOS.

Cornish Hills Takes Major Honors in Orange Horse Show

Perry Entry Carries Off Three Blues

Whitney's The Bear Runner-up First Day Of Event; Balkonian Upset in Morning

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Correspondent.

Orange, Va., Aug. 25.—The two look-alikes of the show game, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's Cornish Hills and Mrs. M. E. Whitney's The Bear, continued their seasonal occupation of pursuing each other as the Perry entry took 15 points toward the hunter championship of the Orange Horse Show today and The Bear was in second place with 8.

Cornish Hills' three blue ribbons put him in line for what may be his second important championship in three days, as he took the same award at the Keswick event Saturday, with Mrs. Whitney's chestnut close behind.

Because of the vagaries of American Horse Shows Association rulings, Cornish Hills is likewise eligible for the green or novice title, in which he has taken 12½ points over J. North Fletcher's 3-year-old hope, Pappy.

An Improved Horse

Although the Perry's handsome chestnut is 7 year old, his jumping form left much to be desired until this season, when constant work by Mrs. Perry gave him needed confidence and form. Nevertheless, his last year's winnings were not sufficient to knock him out of the green ranks, so that he is likely to return to his Cobham stable with two championship rosettes.

His present way of going, close to unbeatable, also is indication of possible major laurels at the Warrenton show which commences Saturday; most railbangers are of the opinion that he is an excellent wager to boost his championship earnings to three in a week.

Biggest upset of the morning classes came when Mr. and Mrs. George Watts Hill's Balkonian, an inveterate winner in model classes, could do no better than fourth place as Cornish Hills was put on top of the heap and the Bear was second, Mrs. Lynch Christian's newest addition to the show world, a 3-year-old named Scotch Yarn, was third.

Pappy Wins Three Classes

Then, in quick succession, Pappy, the Fletcher 3-year-old, won three successive classes, first for hunters of his own age, then a juvenile class shown in hand, and finally the green hunters outing. Alex Calvert had the mount on the youngster, who qualified at Keswick Saturday for the 3-year-old title of Virginia at Warrenton this weekend.

The Bear came into his own in the event for middle and heavyweight hunters, jumping each fence in faultless form to win the blue. He seems to keep getting better and learning more every show said Rider Norman Haymaker, somewhat surprised at the increasing ability of the 8-year-old horse.

Several classes later, another Whitney entry, Cherry Bounce, outhacked his stablemate and Balkonian in the hunter hacks to take 12lst blue ribbon of the year for the Haymaker trained string.

In competition for the horse show bowl, to be won twice by the same exhibitor for permanent possession, Mrs. Whitney's First Night lost an opportunity to carry the trophy back to Llangollen Farm as he was outfenced by Sue Bolling's South American import, Groucho.

This spotted gelding was originally brought from the Argentine as a polo prospect, but his disposition did not take kindly to training so that he was given to Miss Bolling by Raymond Guest.

Indicating that umpires may be wrong sometimes, Heurich's Second Baseman Hershberger is called safe at home in the sixth inning of yesterday's city baseball tournament on the Ellipse, despite the fact Center Market's Wes Moore has the ball on him and his foot hasn't touched the plate yet. Moore protested, but to no avail. Heurich finally won, 6-1

Bucs Recall 10 Rookies From Minors

They are Pitchers Bill Clemensen, Dick Conger and Long Johnny Gee, as well as Infielder Edgar Leip, all with Albany, Eastern League; Pitcher Nick Strincevich, with Milwaukee; Catcher Eddie Fernandes and Outfielder Frank Kalin with St. Paul; Catcher Ray Mueller with the Rochester Internationals; Southpaw Addis Copple with Lancaster, in the Interstate circuit and Catcher Joe Schultz with Portland in the Pacific Coast League.

It was decided to cancel an option on Outfielder Halbert Simpson, who was farmed to Albany.

Manager Frankie Frish received notice during the day that he must pay a $50 fine imposed upon him last week in Brooklyn by an umpire or he would not be permitted upon the field. He was ejected from the park at Brooklyn and later fined for parading before the Pirates' dugout carrying an umbrella in protest against the umpires forcing play to continue in the rain.

Frisch went to the bank and got 50 new $1 bills.

Team Match Set For Rassle Show Here Thursday

The two-man team wrestling, growing each week in popularity, will come back to Turner's Arena Thursday night, with Maurice LaChappelle and Ace Freeman engaging Fred Grobmier and Angelo Leone in a special 30-minute bout.

Two feature matches are on the program. Mildred Burke, the recognized feminine champion, will defend her crown against Mae Young, the Oklahoma City cowgirl, in one of the double windups. In the other, Ernie Dusek, the Nebraska Wildcat, will tangle with the Green Hornet, masked wrestler.

LaChappelle and Freeman are anxious to erase the memory of last week's setback at the hands of Ernie and Rudy Dusek. The youngsters claim Casey Berger, the referee, counted a little too fast, and will demand a rematch should they defeat Grobmier and Leone.

Miss Burke, unbeaten in 400 matches, will be showing locally for the tenth time. Miss Young recently upset the Smoky Mountain (Tenn.) hillbilly, Elvira Snodgrass.

Brother-and-Sister Doubles Team Bows

In another junior semifinal, Simms and Miller defeated Brody and Commert, 6—2, 6—2.

Senior semifinals saw Fogel-Loomis defeatd Hossick-Mulvey, 7—6, 6—4; and Kauffman-Wright trip Barry-McClellan, 6—0, 6—1. Finals will be held on the Mall courts at 10 a. m. this morning.

He looked at me and asked, "Are you speaking for yourself?"

I confessed and he replied, "Haight, you're in such rotten condition that you couldn't catch athlete's foot."

But I'm not going to be discouraged easily. I might not make that team, but I've got my heart set on making that training table. Coach Flaherty saw me trying on a headgear today and he didn't laugh.

Departmental League Champions Eliminated From Federation Tourney; Murnane Stars

Center Market nine, standard-bearer for the Departmental League, was the second club to bow out of the local National Amateur Baseball Federation tournament yesterday, losing a 6-1 decision to the Heurich Brewers of The Washington Post-Industrial League.

Thus the only teams left in competition are the Brewers, Naval Air Station and St. Elizabeths, with Center Market and Veterans' Administration eliminated from a chance to represent Washington in the national meet in Youngstown, Ohio, on September 6. The Airmen and St. Elizabeths tangle on the East Ellipse at 4:30 today, but a loss will eliminate neither, each having won one game in the two-loss-and-out tourney.

Johnny Murnane, George Washington High's former pitcher, was the Brewers' big star yesterday. He set the Marketmen down with three safeties and fanned six of them. Meanwhile, his teammates were banging Frank Watt, local policeman, for eight hits.

It took the only extra-base blow of the game, Huck Stahl's double in the first inning, to tally Heurich's first run and it was never headed thereafter. Stahl's hit scored Pepco Barry, who had singled. Later Stahl also scored on Knight's single.

The Brewers tallied again in the third frame, but really locked things up in the sixth. Successive base hits by Miller, Colliere and Hershberger, followed by Shortstop Elmer Leukhardt's error and a successful double steal accounted for three runs. The last, brought home by Hershberger, was on a questionable decision at home plate but counted just the same.

Cab Softball Ten Defeats Westminster

Yellow Cab softballers, staving off a late rally of the Westminster ten, pulled out a 4-to-3 victory last night as the District of Columbia softball championship tournament continued at Ballston Stadium. In a cofeature the World War Division Club nosed out Bryant Stationery, 3 to 2.

In tonight's games, listed for Washington Softball Stadium, Judd & Detweiler meets the World War Division in the first game of a double knockout for the Section B title, and Yellow Cab comes up against Manhattan Auto & Radio in the A Section. Starting time will be 8 p. m.

Yellow Cab owed last night's triumph to the three-hit hurling of Bump Simonds, though the latter's effort was matched by Westminster's Walterholes. Pitcher Kramer, of Bryant's, turned in the best performance of the night, a two-hitter, but suffered from poor support.

V. P. I., Maryland Sign Three-Year Football Contract

By the Associated Press

Roanoke, Va., Aug. 25.—Virginia Tech has closed a three-year contract with the University of Maryland in football, and the first game will be played in Roanoke on September 25, 1943, Athletic Director W. T. (Monk) Younger announced here.

The 1944 game will be played in Blacksburg in October, while the third game in the series goes to College Park, Md., in 1945.

Younger also announced that the services of Bill Porterfield, captain of the 1933 Tech eleven, had been secured to do scouting for V. P. I. this fall and assist with the freshmen squad.

Ace Fremont Pitcher Purchased by Dodgers

Fremont, Ohio, Aug. 25 (AP).—Lloyd Fisher, left handed pitcher who has scored 17 victories against two defeats for the Fremont Green Sox in the Ohio State League, has been sold to the Brooklyn Dodgers of the National League, Manager Chappie Geygan announced today.

Fisher, from St. Louis, was purchased for Montreal of the International League, but it has not been decided whether he will report after the Ohio State League season closes September 1 or wait until next spring, Geygan said.

Fisher was sold for cash and two players who will be sent here next year, Geygan said.

Star Midget Racers Clash Tonight

Outstanding Drivers In East to Compete In 12½-Mile Event

With one of the strongest fields assembled in Eastern midget racing this season entered, West Lanham Speedway tonight will run off the first annual Southern States Derby in conjunction with six other events starting at 8:30 o'clock.

The Derby, a 12½-mile test for the speedy jitterbugs of automobile racing, will bring together all the "name" drivers on the Eastern circuit. Prize money totaling $3,000 awaits the winners of the various events tonight. Track officials are prepared to handle a crowd of 10,000.

Outstanding in tonight's field will be Wild Bill Holmes, a popular veteran, who has scored spectacular victories from coast to coast and who will be making his debut at West Lanham. Crowding Holmes for recognition, however, will be a select list of drivers which will include Bill Schindler, Lyle Dickey, Mike Joseph, Walt Walker, Bill Troutwine and Len Duncan.

Dickey, the California Comet, bounces back into the picture rather unexpectedly following a whirlwind tour of the Pacific Coast. Both Schindler and Dickey have established two track marks at West Lanham, while Joseph is the leading point scorer and has won two feature races at the speedway.

Crowd of 10,000 Expected to See West Lanham Races

Dark horses scheduled to seek include: Henry Steiger, Bill Baker, Henry Pierson, Frank Beebe, Joe Sheppard, Jim Forte, Hary Harper, Don Morris and Johnny Ringer.

Majority of tonight's cars will be equipped with special tires and devices calculated to take the pressure off them during the grueling 50-lap grind.

Despite tonight's star-studded program there will be no raise in prices.

Joe Hunt to Miss National Tennis Play

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 25.—The war in general and Navy's football aspirations in particular have conspired to weaken the field in the Men's National Tennis Championships this year to a new low, at least for the modern era.

There will be no foreign threat to speak of when the skimpy field of 64 begins play Saturday at Forest Hills, because of the European conflagration, and the domestic list bears only slight resemblance to the days when Don Budge, Ellsworth Vines, Bill Tilden and the others were tearing up the turf.

The Navy's partial responsibility for the situation rests in the fact that Midshipman Joe Hunt looks like he might make a great halfback on the middy eleven this fall, and so there is a natural desire in Annapolis football circles that he not risk his valuable legs and ankles chasing around a tennis court.

So Hunt, who went to the semi-finals of last year's championship before bowing to Bobby Riggs in five sets, and who recently swept through the intercollegiate title meet without losing a set, will not be among those present. Incidentally, one of Hunt's victims last year was Frank Kovacs, who is seeded second to Riggs in the coming meet.

Don McNeill, who won the title last year and then had an unaccountable falling-off in form this summer, is seeded third, with Ted Schroeder fourth, Frankie Parker fifth, Wayne Sabin sixth, John Kramer seventh, and Gardnar Mulloy eighth and last. Those who have watched the recent grass court tournaments rate Riggs and Kovacs about equal favorites.

Heading the seeded list of 62 women is Pauline Betz, of Los Angeles, whose rise has been more or less sensational since she was eliminated in the quarter-finals last year. Alice Marble, who was head and shoulders over the field for several seasons, has, of course, turned professional, and the only former champion in the field is Helen Jacobs.

Seeded in order, following Miss Betz, are Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Cooke, Dorothy May Bundy, Helen Bernhard, Miss Jacobs, Margaret Osborne, Mary Arnold and Mrs. Virginia Wolfenden Kovacs. Valerie Scott and Nina Brown still remain of the British women's Wightman Cup team that was caught on this side by the war two years ago.

Kovacs' first-round opponent will be Barnard Welsh, of Rockville, Md., while Riggs drew C. Robin Hippenstiel, of San Bernardino, Calif.

Tobacco Firms Ask Acquittal In Trust Case

By the Associated Press

Lexington, N. Y.—Declaring 12 weeks of Government evidence had shown no basis for a conviction, the Nation's three largest tobacco companies today asked Federal Judge H. Church Ford to direct a verdict acquitting them of criminal anti-trust charges.

Counsel for the American Tobacco Co., making the opening argument on the defense's motions for peremptory acquittal as the trial entered its thirteenth week, contended prosecution evidence actually had shown vigorous competition among the defendants.

Gordon Dean, of New York City, argued that the Government's evidence that various defendants withdrew discount benefits from dealers during price wars showed that these defendants competed with one another instead of combining to foster a monopoly.

George Whiteside, also of New York City, contended that the Tobacco Merchants Association, which the Government charged was a front used by the defendants in combination to foster illegal joint interests, was no more than a "luncheon or country club."

Arguments by counsel for the Liggett & Myers and R. J. Reynolds Companies were to follow. The arguments were for the benefit of 20 executives and five subsidiaries on trial as well as for the "big three."

The attorneys asked Judge Ford to strike from the record as incompetent, immaterial or irrelevant hundreds of documents introduced by the Government and the testimony of many prosecution witnesses if he decided against directing an acquittal.

Court Approves Wabash Railway Revamping Plan

St. Louis, Aug. 25 (AP).—A reorganization plan for the Wabash Railway Co., which would enable the Pennsylvania Railroad to acquire stock control was approved today by Federal Judge Charles B. Davis.

Judge Davis, who has jurisdiction over the road during the process of reorganization, requested the receivers to take the necessary steps to place the plan in operation.

The Interstate Commerce Commission approved the plan on August 6 and authorized the Pennsylvania to acquire control, saying it was "desirable from the standpoint of an amalgamation of weak and strong roads."

Under the plan the line will be known as the Wabash Railroad Co. and will have a total capitalization of $192,647,795, reduced from $330,-739,265. Its annual fixed interest payments will be reduced from $7,-391,362 to $2,558,418.

Decision Reserved On A. G. E. Settlement

Leibell reserved decision today on a petition by trustees of the Associated Gas & Electric Co. and Associated Gas & Electric Corporation for approval of an agreement providing for settlement of all claims of the two companies against Howard C. Hopson, former head of the Associated System.

Under the agreement, Hopson interests, including Hopson and members of his family, would turn over approximately $4,200,000 in cash and securities to the trustees.

Hopson was convicted December 31 last of using the mails to defraud in connection with misappropriation of funds of system companies and was sentenced to five years, which he is serving at Northeastern Penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa.

Carolina Tobacco Marts Open Today

Raleigh, N. C., Aug. 25 (AP).—Farmers are expecting the highest prices in recent years on the North Carolina new bright tobacco belt, which opens its season's sales tomorrow.

Two factors cause this optimism. Prices on the Carolinas border belt, which opened two weeks ago, started high and have been rising daily. And early arriving buyers on the new bright belt said the crop appeared to be an excellent cigarette type leaf.

The nine South Carolina and seven North Carolina markets on the border belt sold 31,251,234 pounds last week at an average of 28.12 cents a pound, the United States Department of Agriculture reported. All grades on that belt advanced from 1 to 5.50 cents a pound over prices the preceding week and the general average jumped 2.5 cents.

Pa. Oil Trade Decries Order To Cut Prices

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25.—Complying with an order of Price Administrator Leon Henderson, the Joseph Seep purchasing agency of the South Penn Oil Co. today announced a reduction of 23 to 25 cents a barrel in the price of Pennsylvania grade crude oil.

The new price, effective as of August 23, the day Henderson issued theorder, were: Bradford District, $2.75; Southwest Pennsylvania, $2.40, and Eureka, $2.35. They represented cancellation of increases announced August 14.

In a statement accompanying the price announcement, P. M. Curry, president of the South Penn Oil Co., said:

"The price reduction will no doubt have the effect of restricting instead of stimulating activities to increase the production of crude in Pennsylvania, New York State, West Virginia and southeastern Ohio."

"A confirmation of this is a wave of protests that is being made by producers and refiners."

Cites Heavy Draft

In the past, Curry said, the Pennsylvania crude prices issued by the Seep agency always had been based on supply and demand, he added:

"There is a continuing heavy draft on stocks of Pennsylvania grade crude, the office of the Petroleum Coordinator has been emphasizing a shortage of crude and petroleum products on the Eastern Seaboard of emergency proportions."

Meanwhile, directors of the Bradford District Pennsylvania Oil Producers Association at a conference today termed "extremely unfortunate" the Government's decision to peg the price of Pennsylvania grade crudes.

Producers Protest

"Mr. Henderson's order reducing the price of Pennsylvania crude is extremely unfortunate," the producers' statement said. "The consumer does not benefit and if the order is carried through it can only result in decreased drilling, decreased oil production and the lowering of wages which have just been increased on the strength of the price Mr. Henderson has seen fit to cut."

While $2.75 crude was "90 cents higher than it was during August of last year," the producers said, "it also is true that it was . . . $2.82 on June 7, 1937, and no one would claim that war demands had anything to do with the latter price, nor that it was inflationary."

World sugar futures were firm in response to Cuban and other trade demand, but reacted to profit taking to close 3 to 4 points net lower on a turnover of 13,000 tons.

Both the raw and refined markets were quiet with activity limited to deliveries against old contracts.

Taxes Absorb 51.6% of Nets In Six Months

New York, Aug. 24 (AP).—Provision for Federal taxes by 275 industrial companies during the first half of this year amounted to 51.6 per cent of their earnings, compared with 26.7 per cent last year, the National Industrial Conference Board reported today.

The result was, the research organization said, that while earnings increased 82 per cent, taxes chopped the gain down to 20 per cent.

In aircraft manufacturing, a survey showed, the companies found a 67.5 per cent tax provision necessary against 21.1 per cent in the 1940 period. Before taxes earnings were 127 per cent higher than in the first half of 1940; after taxes they were 6 per cent lower. The six companies checked set aside $25,-470,000 for taxes in 1941's first half, compared with $3,923,000 in the 1940 period.

Chemical firms put 53 per cent of their earnings aside for Federal taxes, compared with 24.6 per cent in the first half of last year, making their net earnings decline 1 per cent as compared with a 58 per cent increase before taxes.

A comparison of 16 paper products makers showed a 2 per cent increase in net income after taxes against an increase of 32 per cent before taxes. These companies charged off 47.8 per cent of their earnings for Federal tax reserves against 33 per cent in the first half of 1940.

Wisconsin Utility Issue Awarded To High Bidder

Chicago, Aug. 25 (AP).—A syndicate headed by Glore, Forgan & Co. and Halsey Stuart & Co., highest bidder of four groups, today was awarded the 30 million dollar Wisconsin Power & Light Co. first mortage 3¼ per cent bonds, due August 1, 1971.

Financiers said it was the first clear cut test of the competitive bidding rule of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The syndicate, which made the high bid of 105.5897 for the bonds, said the public offering of the bonds would be made Wednesday at 106⅞.

The Wisconsin Power & Light Co., a unit of the Middle West Corporation, will apply net proceeds of the issue together with three million dollars realized from the sale of serial notes to redemption of 33 million dollars of outstanding first mortgage 4 per cent bonds, due 1966, at 10¢.

Alcoa Hearing Ordered by FPC

By the Associated Press

Examiner Glenn R. Law, of the Federal Power Commission, yesterday denied a motion by counsel for the Aluminum Co. of America for dismissal of an order directing the company to show why three hydroelectric plants it operated should not be under power commission license.

The attorney, Randall LeBouef, jr., asserted that the company or its subsidiaries had reached an agreement under which the Tennessee Valley Authority was to lease the plants and operate them for a period of 20 years, taking the matter of the license out of the company's hands.

The examiner, in denying the motion, said the commission wanted to go fully into the case. He said the hearing probably would be transferred to Knoxville, Tenn., some time next week, for testimony bearing on the navigability of the Little Tennessee River.

Wheat Prices Gyrate on Veto Of 'Freeze' Bill

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 25.—Presidential veto of legislation which would have frozen Government wheat stocks totaling more than 170,000,000 bushels put new life into the wheat market today, but, after fluctuating widely and rapidly, prices wound up only slightly higher than Saturday.

Traders had waited several days for announcement of the President's decision, realizing its importance because about 13 per cent of the Nation's total supply was involved. When the veto was announced prices weakened momentarily, hitting extreme losses of about a cent. However, when selling failed to expand, dealers who had sold "short" began covering positions and the market rallied quickly.

Net gains of as much as 1⅜ cents were chalked up at one time; but, after shorts had covered, profit taking and hedging sales eliminated the advance and wheat closed unchanged to ⅜ higher compared with Saturday, September $1.12, December $1.15⅛@1.15¾.

Weekend rains weakened corn and soybeans. Corn closed ¼@¾ cent lower than Saturday, September 76½, December 80⅝@80¾; oats ⅛@¾ down; soybeans unchanged to ½ off; rye unchanged to ⅛ up and lard 3-5 lower.

Traders said failure of much liquidation to appear after the veto announcement was attributed largely to the fact that a veto had been expected by many interests.

Cotton Rallies After Flurry

New York, Aug. 2 (AP).—Cotton futures closed unchanged to three points lower today after recovering from the brief selling flurry that followed Presidential veto of the loan stocks freezing bill.

The temporary decline, at times as wide as 11 to 15 points, uncovered a considerable volume of buying orders from trade and mill interests. These, plus New Orleans purchases, mostly offset the liquidation.

Minor Gains Dominate Colorless Trade; Rails Edge Higher on Earnings' Increases

New York, Aug. 25.—Buying activities again held a slight edge in today's stock market and minor gains predominated in a slow and colorless session.

There was mild support for selected steels, rubbers, aircrafts, rails, oils and specialties. A sizable number of stocks, receiving no attention to speak of, drifted a bit lower. Brokerage circles derived some encouragement from the absence of selling pressure.

The Associated Press 60-stock composite ended unchanged at 43.2. Of 607 issues traded 215 advanced, 191 declined, and 201 were even with previous finals. It was one of the quietest market of recent months with turnover of 330,370 shares against 362,000 last Friday.

Wall Street quarters, wondering when the stalled speculative engine might get started, saw little to inspire hopes in the news picture. The British-Russian invasion of Iran added a new imponderable in the deeply clouded war situation and prospective bidders continued to keep a wary eye on Washington for further developments in the Government's program of stringent supervision of business.

The slight hardening of prices for certain rails looked like a response to earnings statements of several roads showing substantial net incomes for the first seven months against deficits in the like period last year.

In the division finishing a little ahead were United States Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, United Aircraft, Douglas, General Electric, Air Reduction, Western Union, Santa Fe, Great Northern preferred and Texas Oil. Richfield Oil and American Commrecial Alcohol climbed to new tops. In arrears fractions to around a point were American Can, Westinghouse, Eastman, Sperry, Consolidated Aircraft and Johns-Manville.

In a mixed Curb progress was bade by Creole Petroleum, Humble Oil and Sherwin Williams. Slanting lower were Aluminum Co. of America, American Cyanamid and Electric Bond & Share. Transactions here were around 69,000 shares against 93,000 Friday.

Volume tapered off to $4,901,800, par value, from $5,714,100 last Friday. The Associated Press average of 20 rails gave up 0.3 of a point at 62.8, but other groups showed little change.

Packard Cuts Prices of Most 1942 Models

By the Associated Press

Detroit, Aug. 25.—Max M. Gilman, president of the Packard Motorcar Co., told a joint dealer and distributor meeting here today that he was convinced they could sell all the automobiles the company could build in 1942 but warned them that they "must go to work."

He made the statement in formally announcing Packard's new models. Price revisions including an increase of $200 for the Clipper Six special model and reductions for other models ranging from $40 up to $183 were disclosed at the presentation. The new cars generally follow the styling lines of the Clipper models introduced earlier this year, with a number of refinements, including lower overall height, but greater headroom, less wind drag and greater fuel economy and increased horsepower in all lines.

Judge Signs Final Ban On Investors' Meeting

Baltimore, Aug. 25 (AP)—Judge Edwin T. Dickerson of the Baltimore Supreme Court today signed a final injunction restraining a group of stockholders of International Utilities Corporation from convening in an extraordinary session.

The group, headed by Paul C. Richardson of New York, a director, had sought to call the meeting for last Tuesday "to effect a change in the management of the corporation." A petition to block the session resulted in a temporary injunction, followed by Judge Dickerson's ruling Saturday that the call for the meeting was improper.

Investors Sue To Block J. & L. Disbursement

Pittsburgh, Aug. 25 (AP).—Federal Judge R. M. Gibson today ordered Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation to show cause why it should not be restrained from paying dividends on its new common and preferred stock.

The order was made on a petition of Bertha H. Hubbard and Norman Johnson, both of New York, who began action July 14 to enjoin the company from effecting a plan of recapitalization and merger with Vesta Coal Co. and Shannopin Coal Co.

Stockholders of the company approved the company's plan of reorganization July 22 whereby new common stock would be traded for the old on a share for share basis and holders of seven per cent cumulative preferred stock would exchange each share for one-half share of five per cent preferred, series B, and one and a quarter shares of new common stock.

Failures' Total Dips

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—The number of business failures declined during the week ended August 21 to 227 compared with 230 the previous week, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today. The number was well below the average weekly failures this year.

Week's Steel Rate To Rise Slightly

New York, Aug. 25 (AP).—Steel mills of the United States are expected to operate this week at 96.5 per cent of capacity, the American Iron & Steel Institute reported today.

The rate is .3 of 1 per cent higher than last week and compared with operations at 97.6 per cent of capacity a month ago.

The rate as given today was revised on the basis of an annual domestic output of 86,148,700 tons, announced last Friday, and compared with the previous American steel capacity of 84,152,292 tons a year.

Steel Shortage Delays Pacific Shipbuilding

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 25 (INS).—Shortage of steel of the Pacific Coast is slowing the construction of ships for the Federal Government, a Senate investigating committee was told today in Seattle.

Six ships ways are idle at Wilmington, Calif., and three at Portland, Oreg., because of the shortage, John C. Byrne, chief engineer of the California Shipbuilding Co. at Wilmington, said. He indicated similar situations exist in other coast cities.

The Wilmington yard has received only 30,000 tons of steel, although 45,000 are needed to operate at capacity, Byrne estimated, asserting 2000 more men could be at work if adequate supplies were available. He said deliveries have been better at Seattle.

The committee, headed by Senator Harry S. Truman (Democrat), of Missouri, also heard testimony on the high cost of shipping steel and was told that steel mills should be built on the coast, using supplies of raw materials which, it was asserted, would support medium sized operations.

"It says here that a person with a $500,000 a year income oughta put away $6,684 a week to meet his income tax next April—are you listening to me, Mike?"

Now Arthur Godfrey, whom you've been hearing these many years over WJSV at the unheard of hours from 6 to 8 a. m. (EST), is also heard in New York on a still earlier program (EDST). It's done by land line from WJSV studios.

And so this is to account for a very nice piece on Mr. Godfrey's work which appeared in the New York Times a few days ago.

"Perhaps you have never heard Mr. Godfrey, who comes on at 6:35," says the Times. "If you have not, you will recognize in a minute or two that he is a great man. A droll, discursive fellow, he appears at first to be merely in charge of some musical transcriptions. He discusses the weather, life, death, music; he has his morning coffee and tells you about it; he extends birthday greetings, apologizes for not having a requested record, does a little recruiting work for the Army and Navy. He is a wonderful antidote to the snappy gymnast who starts WMAC's class in callisthenics with a 'good, good morning to you!' At 7:15, knowing you don't care, he reports that the wind is west at 14 miles an hour; at 7:31 he is suggesting 'On Whom The Belles Told' as the title for a novel about racketeers betrayed by their molls. At 7:45 he is ready to sign off.

"'Have a nice, happy day, will you?' says Mr. Godfrey, with mild irony, as if he hadn't put in a full day's work already."
